

Reagan Stays In Race

By United Press International

Ronald Reagan Friday rejected the suggestion from a number of Republican governors that he withdraw as a presidential candidate in order to unify the party.

And Democrat George Wallace said Jimmy Carter should withdraw as a candidate because he has broken a campaign promise to tell the truth by going around the country lying about him.

"I'm going to abide by the wishes of the people, not the politicians," Reagan said while campaigning in North Carolina for next Tuesday's primary. He was replying to a statement issued by North Carolina Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr., Ford's Southern campaign manager, on behalf of nine of the nation's 13 GOP governors.

Bennett And Bowen Didn't Sign

The statement said Reagan should quit his campaign and support Ford because the party cannot "afford the luxury of divisiveness." But immediately two governors, Robert Bennett of Kansas and Otis Bowen of Indiana, said they had not signed the statement, though they agreed in principle.

"I don't think there's anything divisive in a delegate primary contest any more than there is in the Democratic Party," Reagan said.

The division among Democrats Friday was between Carter and Wallace.

"You should have heard the things he said about me in Illinois. You should have heard the things he said about me in Florida and I never opened my mouth," Wallace said. The Alabama governor said Carter has been saying that if he ever told a lie he should drop out of the race.

'He's Not All He Says He Is'

"Now he should do it," said Wallace. Later, however, Wallace said he was not really asking Carter to get out of the race. "I'm just trying to get him to say that he's not all that he says he is."

One of the issues, Wallace said, was Carter's alleged support of him at the 1972 national convention and as a running mate for Hubert Humphrey.

Carter, who has denied supporting Wallace, was asked about the charge by reporters and conceded he said a Humphrey-Wallace ticket would have done well in the South and he would have supported it because of party loyalty.

"With Humphrey and Wallace on one side and Nixon and Agnew on the other side, I would not have hesitated," Carter said.

The GOP governors' statement followed by two days a request by a group of GOP mayors that he quit.

Reagan responded, "I'm not going to take my advice from the campaign organization of Mr. Ford. Those are the same governors who at the beginning pledged support to Mr. Ford."

Ford, in an interview with a Charlotte television station released Friday, withdrew his previous assessment that his victory over Reagan in Illinois this week was a "clunker." He said a victory in next week's North Carolina primary "would be very helpful but I wouldn't categorize any one particular primary as a knockout punch."

Ford, in his interview, defended himself against Reagan charges that he was abusing the power of his office by promising federal aid on locally important projects in primary states.

"That is a completely inaccurate charge," he said. "We haven't dangled pork barrel projects in any state."

Heart Center's Need Questioned

By BOB GUENTHER

Star Staff Writer

The president of the Nebraska Medical Association and a prominent Lincoln cardiologist said Friday the need for an $8 million Cardiovascular Center for the University of Nebraska Medical Center has yet to be demonstrated.

Dr. Warren Bosley of Grand Island, association president, said, "On the surface, it's hard for me to see the need for this facility. I'd like to know what the justification for this center is."

Lincoln cardiologist Dr. Walt Weaver, speaking for himself and two colleagues, said he is not opposed to the center at this point but added, "My question is, is there a demonstrated need for such a facility?"

"There may be one, but I'm not aware of it."

$250,000 Allotted

The Legislature's Appropriations Committee by a 7-2 vote included $250,000 in planning money to get the project started. That capital construction bill is on general file awaiting action.

The center was not included in the university budget as approved by the regents. Regent Robert Koefoot has stated, "at no time has this cardiovascular center been on the capital construction priority list of the board of regents."

Dr. Bosley was critical of the way funds have been secured for the center. He said, "I do think the request should've gone through usual channels."

"It appears to me that the University Medical Center ought to present to the state what they think their mission is. I get the feeling that there doesn't appear to be much sincere long-range planning in this," he said.

'No Need Demonstrated'

Dr. Weaver said, "Regarding the diagnosis and treatment aspects of this center, I don't know there has been a demonstrated need. No one is crying out for cardiological studies. We're not overwhelmed or operating at full capacity."

The Cardiovascular Center is likely to be a point of debate when the Legislature takes up the capital construction bill, due to questions raised by the medical community and opposition from Koefoot.

The Cardiovascular Center is a project begun by Dr. Robert Eliot of the Medical Center, who joined the staff in July, 1972.

The center did not really get moving until Dr. Eliot interested David Tews, a Lincoln attorney and one of the most respected and influential lobbyists at the Legislature.

27 On Staff

In 1974, the center got its first $450,000 operating appropriation from the Unicameral over Gov. J. James Exon's veto. Since that time, Dr. Eliot said the center has recruited 27 "top-drawer" people to staff it.

It has also initiated a computerized consultation service allowing immediate contact with any physician or hospital in the state, community visitations by staff members to discuss heart problems with local doctors, a Heartline to Health television programs aired via educational television and research and one-week learning sessions for practicing physicians.

Dr. Eliot hopes the Med Center's Cardiovascular Center will one day rival Houston's heart center. "I think it will be better than that."

Tews Got Involved

Tews became interested in the project after he came to Dr. Eliot for a check-up. Tews, it turned out, had no heart disease.

Tews was intrigued by Dr. Eliot's plans and asked what it would take to accomplish them.

"All hell broke loose after that. I didn't realize who he was. He took a major interest in it, because he would like to see other people benefit from it," Dr. Eliot said.

Now Dr. Eliot said he'd like to have a roof over the staff's head. As it is now, the center is scattered in four parts, one section being five stories high with no elevator access. "Anybody who can get up those steps doesn't need to see us," he said.

The total construction cost has been estimated at $12-13 million with an annual operating budget of $1.6 million.

Malpractice Issue Revised By Unicam

By DON WALTON

Star Staff Writer

With time running out, the Legislature Friday resumed its medical malpractice debate and liberalized the latest revised proposal now under consideration.

Senators voted to abandon both their rules and their budget deliberations to return to the malpractice issue which has haunted and delayed their past two weeks in session.

Only eight days remain in the scheduled 60-day session — and Friday's detailed six-hour look at the malpractice proposal managed to complete work on less than nine of the 44 pages of the revised bill.

Among bills now piled up behind the malpractice issue are all proposals for capital construction projects, none of which have yet reached first stage debate.

Maneuver Successful

Sen. Loran Schmitt of Bellwood successfully engineered a parliamentary maneuver which allowed his malpractice proposal to leap over the budget bills into immediate consideration at the second stage of floor debate.

On a 38-7 vote, the Legislature agreed to suspend its rules and allow Schmitt to lift his malpractice proposal from LB703, stuck on the first step of floor consideration, and insert it into LB434, a bill which had already reached the second stage.

LB434 was gutted of its original language relating to retail purchases from meat packers to make way for the malpractice provisions.

"I have an obligation to use whatever means are available," Schmitt explained. "It is vital we consider the malpractice issue this year."

Chambers Demands Debate

The ensuing debate, which Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha insisted be undertaken in a separate look at all 57 sections, produced one major revision.

Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln won approval of an amendment which liberalizes the definition of malpractice damages to include "those losses which have been or shall be sustained by the claimant as a direct and proximate result of the defendant's wrongful acts as established by a preponderance of the evidence."

That, in effect, would maintain the current legal remedy to recover damages for losses other than economic factors, including losses incurred in so-called "pain and suffering."

Schmitt accepted the change, and it was approved on a 31-0 vote.

Definition Replaced

The Luedtke amendment replaced a rather vague definition of damages which may or may not have extended beyond economic losses, depending on subsequent court interpretations.

The malpractice proposal had originally attempted to limit recovery to strictly economic loss.

At issue when senators adjourned for the day was a proposal that allows citizens to remove themselves from coverage under the new law by informing the state insurance director of their decision in writing.

That portion of the bill is designed to overcome possible constitutional objections to restrictions on a citizen's rights to recover damages. The bill would limit such recovery to $500,000.

Chambers attempted to wipe out the option for the citizen since, he said, it offers "no real choice at all," only the alternative of not being able to receive medical treatment in Nebraska.

"Let's make it an honest rip-off," he said.

Chambers Motion Fails

His motion fell on a 6-25 crash. Sen. John Cavanaugh III of Omaha offered an amendment which switches the citizen's role to electing to come under the provisions of the new law if he wishes by so informing the insurance director.

That proposal, which Cavanaugh said would at least require "a conscious decision" to limit this right to recovery of damages, was pending when the Unicameral members went home for the weekend.

Late in the day Sen. Glenn Goodrich of Omaha came within two votes of once again suspending the legislative rules to ignore Chambers' request for a section-by-section review of the bill, and consider the last 25 pages in one motion.

Needing 30 votes, his motion fell on a 28-12 vote.

Debate is scheduled to resume Monday.

Carl Cole can go back to counting sheep tonight.

The Northeast High School senior has spent the last few weeks drifting into dreamland while memorizing the script for his lead in the all-school play.

"I'd recite my lines and fall asleep half way through and then I'd wake up and turn off the lights," he said, laughing about his nocturnal activities.

But all that pre-play priming is now behind him as the high school thespians took to the stage Thursday and Friday.

Performing at Northeast is nothing new for Carl, he's been in all six plays during his three years at the school.

Likes It Up Front

"I like to be in front of people," Carl said, explaining his love for the dramatic arts.

"Ever since I was a little kid, everybody would say I was funny," the 17-year-old related. "I suppose you could call me a ham."

Carl recalls his theatrical debut when he was "Munchkin-sized," playing none other than king of the Munchkins in a Community Playhouse rendering of "The Wizard of Oz."

Since then he's enjoyed a variety of parts from a butler to the title role in "Noah."

"I don't think I'm typecast yet," he sighed with relief.

Prefers Abstract

While he does do some pantomime, which he defines as "light-hearted clowning around," Carl said he prefers the "abstract and more symbolic" art of mime.

The subtlety in mime is achieved by the performer's accomplished "inner eye," said Carl. "It's knowing what you're doing without seeing it."

Carl creates some of his own mime acts. One advantage of making up mime, Carl pointed out, is you don't have to write anything down. Every mimmer, however, does a robbery scene, he says, because the silence of breaking into a house lends itself to the art form.

As an independent study project for school, Carl expects to put together a videotape on the techniques of mime.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Cole, 3900 Dudley, Carl is anxiously awaiting the results of his recent audition in Kansas City for admission to the New York University School of Arts.

In any case he'll be heading to college for sure. "I'm scared to give the next four years of my life to acting and then find out I don't want to do it," he explained.

Corruption Within FBI Probed By Justice Dept.

By The New York Times

Washington — The Department of Justice has begun a criminal investigation into the first alleged instance of internal financial corruption in the history of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, according to knowledgeable officials within the department.

The principal target of the unprecedented investigation, these officials said, is John P. Mohr, the retired head of the FBI's administrative division, who was responsible for approving all purchases of bureau equipment.

Justice Department lawyers, who were described by one official as certainly working on a possible indictment of Mohr and possibly other past and present FBI officials, are understood to be focusing on the bureau's relationship with a private firm that since 1938 has procured electronic eavesdropping equipment for the bureau.

A report of an internal bureau investigation of the potential scandal, ordered last year by FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley and forwarded last month to Atty. Gen. Edward R. Levi, was returned to Kelley recently with instructions to undertake a more extensive inquiry, the officials said.

The initial investigation, which one official conceded could be characterized as a "whitewash," was ordered after one electronics manufacturer told the House Intelligence Committee the cost of equipment he sold to the bureau through the firm, known as U.S. Recording Co., had been pushed up a third before being passed on to the FBI.

But the department's investigation, which top FBI officials fear will irreparably tarnish the bureau's image of incorruptibility if it results in any indictments, is known to be chiefly concerned with suggestions that Mohr or other FBI officials have received kickbacks from Joseph X. Tait, the head of U.S. Recording.

Agents of the Internal Revenue Service have already conducted an investigation into Mohr's net worth.

Reagan Stays In Race

By United Press International

Ronald Reagan Friday rejected the suggestion from a number of Republican governors that he withdraw as a presidential candidate in order to unify the party.

And Democrat George Wallace said Jimmy Carter should withdraw as a candidate because he has broken a campaign promise to tell the truth by going around the country lying about him.

"I'm going to abide by the wishes of the people, not the politicians," Reagan said while campaigning in North Carolina for next Tuesday's primary. He was replying to a statement issued by North Carolina Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr., Ford's Southern campaign manager, on behalf of nine of the nation's 13 GOP governors.

The statement said Reagan should quit his campaign and support Ford because the party cannot "afford the luxury of divisiveness." But immediately two governors, Robert Bennett of Kansas and Otis Bowen of Indiana, said they had not signed the statement, though they agreed in principle.

"I don't think there's anything divisive in a delegate primary contest any more than there is in the Democratic Party," Reagan said.

The division among Democrats Friday was between Carter and Wallace.

"You should have heard the things he said about me in Illinois. You should have heard the things he said about me in Florida and I never opened my mouth," Wallace said. The Alabama governor said Carter has been saying that if he ever told a lie he should drop out of the race.

"Now he should do it," said Wallace. Later, however, Wallace said he was not really asking Carter to get out of the race. "I'm just trying to get him to say that he's not all that he says he is."

One of the issues, Wallace said, was Carter's alleged support of him at the 1972 national convention and as a running mate for Hubert Humphrey.

Carter, who has denied supporting Wallace, was asked about the charge by reporters and conceded he said a Humphrey-Wallace ticket would have done well in the South and he would have supported it because of party loyalty.

"With Humphrey and Wallace on one side and Nixon and Agnew on the other side, I would not have hesitated," Carter said.

The GOP governors' statement followed by two days a request by a group of GOP mayors that he quit.

Reagan responded, "I'm not going to take my advice from the campaign organization of Mr. Ford. Those are the same governors who at the beginning pledged support to Mr. Ford."

Ford, in an interview with a Charlotte television station released Friday, withdrew his previous assessment that his victory over Reagan in Illinois this week was a "clincher." He said a victory in next week's North Carolina primary "would be very helpful but I wouldn't categorize any one particular primary as a knockout punch."

Heart Center's Need Questioned

By BOB GUENTHER

The president of the Nebraska Medical Association and a prominent Lincoln cardiologist said Friday the need for an $8 million Cardiovascular Center for the University of Nebraska Medical Center has yet to be demonstrated.

Dr. Warren Bosley of Grand Island, association president, said, "On the surface, it's hard for me to see the need for this facility. I'd like to know what the justification for this center is."

'No Need Demonstrated'

Dr. Weaver said, "Regarding the diagnosis and treatment aspects of this center, I don't know there has been a demonstrated need. No one is crying out for cardiological studies. We're not overwhelmed or operating at full capacity."

The Cardiovascular Center is likely to be a point of debate when the Legislature takes up the capital construction bill, due to questions raised by the medical community and opposition from Koefoot.

The Cardiovascular Center is a project begun by Dr. Robert Eliot of the Medical Center, who joined the staff in July, 1972.

The center did not really get moving until Dr. Eliot interested David Tews, a Lincoln attorney and one of the most respected and influential lobbyists at the Legislature.

27 On Staff

In 1974, the center got its first $450,000 operating appropriation from the Unicameral over Gov. J. James Exon's veto. Since that time, Dr. Eliot said the center has recruited 27 "top-drawer" people to staff it.

It has also initiated a computerized consultation service allowing immediate contact with any physician or hospital in the state, community visitations by staff members to discuss heart problems with local doctors, a Heartline to Health television programs aired via educational television and research and one-week learning sessions for practicing physicians.

Dr. Eliot hopes the Med Center's Cardiovascular Center will one day rival Houston's heart center. "I think it will be better than that."

Malpractice Issue Revised By Unicam

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

With time running out, the Legislature Friday resumed its medical malpractice debate and liberalized the latest revised proposal now under consideration.

Senators voted to abandon both their rules and their budget deliberations to return to the malpractice issue which has haunted and delayed their past two weeks in session.

Only eight days remain in the scheduled 60-day session — and Friday's detailed six-hour look at the malpractice proposal managed to complete work on less than nine of the 44 pages of the revised bill.

Among bills now piled up behind the malpractice issue are all proposals for capital construction projects, none of which have yet reached first stage debate.

Maneuver Successful

Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood successfully engineered a parliamentary maneuver which allowed his malpractice proposal to leap over the budget bills into immediate consideration at the second stage of floor debate.

On a 38-7 vote, the Legislature agreed to suspend its rules and allow Schmit to lift his malpractice proposal from LB703, stuck on the first step of floor consideration, and insert it into LB434, a bill which had already reached the second stage.

LB434 was gutted of its original language relating to retail purchases from meat packers to make way for the malpractice provisions.

"I have an obligation to use whatever means are available," Schmit explained. "It is vital we consider the malpractice issue this year."

Chambers Demands Debate

The ensuing debate, which Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha insisted be undertaken in a separate look at all 57 sections, produced one major revision.

Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln won approval of an amendment which liberalizes the definition of malpractice damages to include "those losses which have been or shall be sustained by the claimant as a direct and proximate result of the defendant's wrongful acts as established by a preponderance of the evidence."

That, in effect, would maintain the current legal remedy to recover damages for losses other than economic factors, including losses incurred in so-called "pain and suffering."

Schmit accepted the change, and it was approved on a 31-0 vote.

Definition Replaced

The Luedtke amendment replaced a rather vague definition of damages which may or may not have extended beyond economic losses, depending on subsequent court interpretations.

The malpractice proposal had originally attempted to limit recovery to strictly economic loss.

At issue when senators adjourned for the day was a proposal that allows citizens to remove themselves from coverage under the new law by informing the state insurance director of their decision in writing.

That portion of the bill is designed to overcome possible constitutional objections to restrictions on a citizen's rights to recover damages. The bill would limit such recovery to $500,000.

Chambers attempted to wipe out the option for the citizen since, he said, it offers "no real choice at all," only the alternative of not being able to receive medical treatment in Nebraska.

"Let's make it an honest rip-off," he said.

Chambers Motion Fails

His motion fell on a 6-25 crash.

Sen. John Cavanaugh III of Omaha offered an amendment which switches the citizen's role to electing to come under the provisions of the new law if he wishes by so informing the insurance director.

That proposal, which Cavanaugh said would at least require "a conscious decision . . . to limit (his) right to recovery of damages," was pending when the Unicameral members went home for the weekend.

Late in the day, Sen. Glenn Goodrich of Omaha came within two votes of once again suspending the legislative rules to ignore Chambers' request for a section-by-section review of the bill, and consider the last 35 pages in one motion.

Needing 30 votes, his motion fell on a 28-12 vote.

Debate is scheduled to resume Monday.

Demos Say Yes; Ford Men Say No

Washington (AP) — Labor leader George Meany and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., joined forces Friday night to call for speedy passage of a full-employment law designed to reduce the jobless rate to no more than 3% over the next four years.

The concept was opposed earlier in the day by Ford administration spokesmen who called it unworkable and more likely to retard than advance economic recovery.

AFL-CIO President Meany said organized labor will not accept high levels of unemployment indefinitely and said the Ford administration intends exactly that.

The jobless rate currently is 7.6%, and White House economic forecasts do not foresee it dropping below 7% through 1977.

Humphrey, chairman of the congressional joint economic committee, said a system "which cannot provide the dignity and self-esteem which come from honest work and self-support is a system that is in serious trouble."

Humphrey's and Meany's speeches were given at a dinner honoring the committee and the passage in 1946 of the employment act, which set full employment as a goal without providing programs to achieve it. Meany had the flu and his speech was read by I. W. Abel, president of the steelworkers union.

Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, joined with Alan Greenspan, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, in opposing the full-employment legislation sponsored by Humphrey and other congressional Democrats.

Burns said, however, that the government should serve as an "employer of last resort" but only after all other efforts to increase employment have failed.

And he told a congressional conference on full employment that those jobs should be made deliberately unattractive to encourage those who hold them to seek work elsewhere.

In his speech, Meany accused Burns of trying to buy votes for President Ford by using "election witchcraft" to ease up on tight-money and high-interest-rate policies to temporarily boost business and create jobs.

He said it is also apparent that President Ford will try to characterize the full-employment concept as "leaf-raking."

Meany said the proposal has far more substance than that and envisions the creation of jobs to develop energy resources, modernize factories and build mass-transit systems, housing and water-and-sewer systems, while providing more policemen, firefighters, doctors and sanitation workers.

"These needs are much more than leaf-raking," Meany said. "They are needs that a full-employment program would fulfill."

Greenspan said such a program could "create wholly new instabilities in our economy" that might hinder more than help the nation's economic recovery.

He reiterated the Ford administration's theme that inflation, more than anything else, produced the high unemployment rates of recent years.

Swallows, Tourists Return To Capistrano

San Juan Capistrano, Calif. (AP) — Yes, indeed, the swallows returned to Capistrano — 350 of them at 8:31 a.m. Friday to mark the 200th anniversary of a legend.

Ornithologists say the gentle birds straggle to their nesting areas here from Argentina all during March. But local folks and traditions say the swallows have returned to the Mission San Juan Capistrano every St. Joseph's Day, March 19, since 1776.

"The streets were packed with people," said mission spokesman Bill Smith. He said many people slept in their cars on the winding streets near the mission.

The bells rang as the birds descended on the Spanish style mission. The birds, say the legend, are scheduled to leave for South America on Oct. 23.

Users Of Telephones Can Now Shop Around

Washington (AP) — Telephone users will be able to shop around for all their phone equipment under a new Federal Communications Commission ruling.

The decision announced Thursday virtually ends the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s control over what phone equipment is installed in the nation's homes and businesses.

Customers now will be able to buy telephones, switchboards and other equipment from private vendors without having to pay AT&T for connecting devices.

AT&T contends that may prove a bane, not a blessing.

"The quality and cost of telephone service for millions of Americans will be adversely affected by the decision," predicted AT&T Board Chairman John D. DeButts.

AT&T claims competition may actually drive up consumers' phone costs. It warns that, consumers may buy inferior equipment that will be more expensive to repair.

The new rules will require all equipment manufacturers, including AT&T, to register their products with the FCC so the agency can be certain they will not harm the phone network.

The ruling broadens an FCC decision last Nov. 7 that allowed phone users to hook up terminal equipment like extension phones and message-recording devices without paying AT&T.

The earlier decision excluded main telephones, switchboards, coin phones and "key" telephones, which are used by businesses to handle incoming calls on separate buttons.

But the latest action exempts pay phones only.

The FCC voted 5 to 2 for the sweeping change. The new rules go into effect for most equipment May 1, and for switchboards and key telephones Aug. 1.

William C. Mott, vice president of the U.S. Independent Telephone Association, also criticized the FCC decision.

Mott declared, "We believe the commission has circumvented the clear intent of Congress as stated in the Communications Act of 1934, namely that Americans should have universal inexpensive telephone service."

The two FCC dissenters, Commissioners Benjamin L. Hooks and James Quello, said the commission should have investigated the economic impact further.

The majority concluded, however, that "no valid legal or technical basis had been advanced" for continuing to exclude main telephones, switchboards and key telephone equipment from the registration program.

LT&T Man Sees Higher Rates

A spokesman for the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co. said Friday the new federal ruling will "undoubtedly" lead to increased costs to the consumer and a poorer telephone system.

James Vanderslice of LT&T said when telephone equipment from private vendors replaces equipment supplied by LT&T, the telephone company stands to lose a significant portion of its revenues. Consumers will have to pay increased rates for basic telephone service to make up the revenue loss, he said.

"There is no way of determining what the effect will be in dollars and cents."

But he said there is no question it will lead to increased rates.

The quality of telephone service will also deteriorate, Vanderslice said. LT&T "will not maintain or service equipment that does not belong to the company and from which we derive no revenue."

Service contracts for privately owned telephone equipment is a possibility, Vanderslice said. But the ruling raises so many complex questions that the company doesn't have the answers yet, he said.

Ex-Nazi Won't Be Rotary President

Evanston, Ill. (UPI) — Faced with mounting opposition to his background as a wartime Nazi SS trooper, Austrian industrialist Wolfgang Wick withdrew Friday as sole nominee for president of Rotary International, the global service club.

The current president, Ernesto Imbassahy de Mello, a Brazilian, told a news conference Wick had withdrawn from the nomination which would have made him the president in 1977-78.

"Mr. Wick resigned by his own initiative," the Brazilian said. "As an old Rotarian, he resigned thinking of the organization."

Imbassahy said Wick gave up

"for personal reasons" and acknowledged the organization was "relieved" by his decision.

He said there has been pressure from the news media and Rotary clubs to have Wick withdraw. He said he had received more than 1,000 letters and telephone calls "and most were not favorable."

Officials at the international headquarters in Chicago said W. Jack Davis, a Hamilton, Bermuda, businessman and a former Rotary vice president, will replace Wick as the new nominee for the 1977-78 presidency.

Sandberg said he had known Wick for more than 10 years.

Patty's Mom Rushes Out Of Court In Tears

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The question of Patricia Hearst's guilt or innocence on bank robbery charges was placed in the hands of her jurors Friday after the defendant's mother, overcome by emotion, rushed from the hushed courtroom in tears.

Randolph Hearst said later that his wife, Catherine, saw this first day of decision at the celebrated trial as "the end of the line" for her accused daughter.

Jurors, who had heard the testimony from 67 witnesses, were asked to decide whether Miss Hearst was a determined terrorist or a terrified victim when she sprinted into the Hibernia Bank here April 15, 1974, and helped rob it of $10,690, brandishing a sawed-off carbine.

But they were instructed specifically that the heiress frequently mentioned Feb. 4, 1974, kidnapping by the Symbionese Liberation Army "is not alone enough to absolve her from the criminal acts" with which she is charged.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter, taking no note of Mrs. Hearst's quiet departure during his instructions, gave the crucial order at 10:47 a.m.

The Princess And The Earl Break Up

London (AP) — Princess Margaret and her photographer husband Antony Armstrong-Jones

Jones, the earl of Snowdon, broke up a 16-year-old marriage Friday with a 39-word statement announcing that the couple has decided to "live apart."

The statement, approved by Margaret's older sister, Queen Elizabeth II, said there will be no divorce. The queen is temporal head of the Church of England, which vigorously opposes divorce.

Two hours after the announcement, Margaret left her Kensington Palace home by car with her children, Viscount Linley, 14, and Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 11. She sat unsmiling in the red station wagon with the children on either side of their nanny in a rear seat.

Some observers said the 45-year-old princess, dressed in an orange coat with a silk scarf around her neck, looked strained under the deep tan she acquired on her recent Caribbean holiday with her 28-year-old friend Roddy Llewellyn, a brewery heir.

"It's sad to see any marriage breakup, especially in a Christian country," he said.

"It's just natural," said machinist Eric Carter. "They're the same as anyone else. It shows there is no difference between the rich, the poor, and royalty."

It's No Surprise To Most

London (UPI) — Britons received the news of the separation of Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon with mixed feelings Friday. But for most it came as no surprise.

Demos Say Yes; Ford Men Say No

Washington (AP) — Labor leader George Meany and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., joined forces Friday night to call for speedy passage of a full-employment law designed to reduce the jobless rate to no more than 3% over the next four years.

The concept was opposed earlier in the day by Ford administration spokesmen who called it unworkable and more likely to retard than advance economic recovery.

AFL-CIO President Meany said organized labor will not accept high levels of unemployment indefinitely and said the Ford administration intends exactly that.

The jobless rate currently is 7.6%, and White House economic forecasts do not foresee it dropping below 7% through 1977.

Humphrey, chairman of the congressional joint economic committee, said a system "which cannot provide the dignity and self-esteem which come from honest work and self-support is a system that is in serious trouble."

Humphrey's and Meany's speeches were given at a dinner honoring the committee and the passage in 1946 of the employment act, which set full employment as a goal without providing programs to achieve it. Meany had the flu and his speech was read by I. W. Abel, president of the steelworkers union.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation took its smallest bite of the family budget in more than four years in February, as grocery prices fell sharply and gasoline dropped by almost a penny a gallon, the government reported Friday.

Lower beef prices led a 1.5 per cent decline in grocery prices, the biggest monthly drop in 24 years.

The Labor Department said the decline in food prices — the second in two months — was the big factor in holding over-all consumer prices to a seasonally adjusted increase of only one-tenth of 1 per cent last month.

February's increase compared with a four-tenths of a per cent rise in January and was the smallest monthly hike since September 1971, when retail prices also rose one-tenth of a per cent.

Grocery prices, which account for about 20 per cent of the Consumer Price Index, are subject to rapid up-and-down changes depending on weather, crop conditions and demand. Problems with drought in the Midwest this winter, for example, could boost prices in the spring.

Last month's decline in grocery prices was the biggest since February 1952 when they fell 1.6 per cent. But the decline failed to wipe out nearly three years of steady increases.

Over-all consumer prices were 6.3 per cent above a year ago, the smallest 12-month increase since July 1973 and a contrast to February 1975 when they were rising at a rate of 11.1 per cent a year.

The Consumer Price Index, which is not adjusted for seasonal factors, was at 167.1 last month. This meant that it cost $167.10 to buy the same goods and services that cost $100 in 1967.

The Labor Department said beef prices dropped 5.9 per cent last month. Dairy products dropped for the first time in nine months and cereals in bakery products were down, as were pork, poultry, sugar, fruits and vegetables. Coffee continued to rise, however.

The over-all food index, which includes restaurant meals, was down 1 per cent, the government said.

Prices of commodities other than foods rose three-tenths of a per cent in February, a rate slightly higher than in January. Prices for automobiles, cigarettes and clothing increased but gasoline and motor oil continued to fall.

The Labor Department said the average nationwide price of regular grade gasoline fell 1.2 per cent to 57.8 cents per gallon.

The cost of service continued rising at a sharp rate, climbing another seven-tenths of a per cent in February.

Higher medical costs were largely to blame, the government said. Auto insurance rates also rose again, but mortgage interest rates dropped for the first time since last May.

In a separate report, the Labor Department said the purchasing power of the average workers' paycheck was unchanged in February as inflation and a decline in average hours worked offset an increase in earnings. Over the years, buying power was up 4.8 per cent.

Curtis Votes To End Campaign Financing
Washington (AP) — Nebraska Sen. Carl Curtis was among Republicans voting for an amendment to end public financing of presidential election campaigns after this year. Senators rejected the amendment 54-34.

More Cash For Reinvestment Is Generated By Corporations

Washington (AP) — The government said Friday that nominal after-tax profits of corporations declined last year for the first time in five years, but corporations still managed to generate nearly 50% more money for reinvestment than in 1974.

The development held out the prospect of more support for general economic growth as corporations begin spending that extra money.

The Commerce Department said after-tax profits for the year declined by $8.1 billion, or 11.3%, in 1975 to $71.4 billion. That was the first drop since the 18.3% dive in 1970.

The over-all drop in 1975 came despite the fact that after-tax profits increased steadily each quarter throughout the year, rising at an annual rate of 9.5% to $80.8 billion in the final three months of the year.

The normal after-tax figures, however, didn't measure the impact of the slowdown in inflation on corporate profits during the year. When prices are increasing rapidly, as they were in 1974, the rise in price of a product from the time the company buys raw materials or components to the time the finished product is sold can be reflected as a profit, even though the company then has to restock at higher prices.

The Commerce Department corrects for that by adjusting figures to remove so-called "inflation profits" and capital consumption, the gradual wearing out of machinery and the steadily rising cost of eventually replacing it.

After adjustments, corporate profits during the year showed an increase to 41.9% to a level of $54.9 billion. Since the money paid out in dividends over the year rose only slightly — by $1.7 billion to $32.8 billion — that meant corporations were in better financial condition at the end of 1975.

And the higher profits after adjustment for inflation meant more corporate cash to invest in the new facilities which create new jobs and help hold down prices through more effective production.

Consumer Confidence Index Rises

New York (AP) — U.S. consumer confidence continued to climb in January and February, regaining nearly all of the ground lost in the 1973-75 recession, the Conference Board reported.

The board, a nonprofit business-research group, said its confidence index rose to 93.3 in February, up more than six points since December 1975. The index stood at 96.2 in October 1973, just before the onset of the recession.

The survey, conducted for the board by National Family Opinion Inc., covers 10,000 families across the country.

Consumers are also somewhat more pleased with current economic conditions.

Fall In Food Prices Holds Down Rise In Consumer Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation took its smallest bite of the family budget in more than four years in February, as grocery prices fell sharply and gasoline dropped by almost a penny a gallon, the government reported Friday.

Lower beef prices led a 1.5 per cent decline in grocery prices, the biggest monthly drop in 24 years.

The Labor Department said the decline in food prices — the second in two months — was the big factor in holding over-all consumer prices to a seasonally adjusted increase of only one-tenth of 1 per cent last month.

February's increase compared with a four-tenths of a per cent rise in January and was the smallest monthly hike since September 1971, when retail prices also rose one-tenth of a per cent.

Grocery prices, which account for about 20 per cent of the Consumer Price Index, are subject to rapid up-and-down changes depending on weather, crop conditions and demand. Problems with drought in the Midwest this winter, for example, could boost prices in the spring.

Last month's decline in grocery prices was the biggest since February 1952 when they fell 1.6 per cent. But the decline failed to wipe out nearly three years of steady increases.

Over-all consumer prices were 6.3 per cent above a year ago, the smallest 12-month increase since July 1973 and a contrast to February 1975 when they were rising at a rate of 11.1 per cent a year.

The Consumer Price Index, which is not adjusted for seasonal factors, was at 167.1 last month. This meant that it cost $167.10 to buy the same goods and services that cost $100 in 1967.

The Labor Department said beef prices dropped 5.9 per cent last month. Dairy products dropped for the first time in nine months and cereals in bakery products were down, as were pork, poultry, sugar, fruits and vegetables. Coffee continued to rise, however.

The over-all food index, which includes restaurant meals, was down 1 per cent, the government said.

Prices of commodities other than foods rose three-tenths of a per cent in February, a rate slightly higher than in January. Prices for automobiles, cigarettes and clothing increased but gasoline and motor oil continued to fall.

The Labor Department said the average nationwide price of regular grade gasoline fell 1.2 per cent to 57.8 cents per gallon.

The cost of service continued rising at a sharp rate, climbing another seven-tenths of a per cent in February.

Higher medical costs were largely to blame, the government said. Auto insurance rates also rose again, but mortgage interest rates dropped for the first time since last May.

In a separate report, the Labor Department said the purchasing power of the average workers' paycheck was unchanged in February as inflation and a decline in average hours worked offset an increase in earnings. Over the years, buying power was up 4.8 per cent.

Curtis Votes To End Campaign Financing

Washington (AP) — Nebraska Sen. Carl Curtis was among Republicans voting for an amendment to end public financing of presidential election campaigns after this year.

Senators rejected the amendment 54-34.

More Cash For Reinvestment Is Generated By Corporations

Washington (AP) — The government said Friday that nominal after-tax profits of corporations declined last year for the first time in five years, but corporations still managed to generate nearly 50% more money for reinvestment than in 1974.

The development held out the prospect of more support for general economic growth as corporations begin spending that extra money.

The Commerce Department said after-tax profits for the year declined by $8.1 billion, or 11.3%, in 1975 to $71.4 billion. That was the first drop since the 18.3% dive in 1970.

The over-all drop in 1975 came despite the fact that after-tax profits increased steadily each quarter throughout the year, rising at an annual rate of 9.5% to $80.6 billion in the final three months of the year.

The normal after-tax figures, however, didn't measure the impact of the slowdown in inflation on corporate profits during the year. When prices are increasingly rapidly, as they were in 1974, the rise in price of a product from the time the company buys raw materials or components to the time the finished product is sold can be reflected as a profit, even though the company then has to restock at higher prices.

The Commerce Department corrects for that by adjusting figures to remove so-called "inflation profits" and capital consumption, the gradual wearing out of machinery and the steadily rising cost of eventually replacing it.

After adjustments, corporate profits during the year showed an increase to 41.9% to a level of $54.9 billion. Since the money paid out in dividends over the year rose only slightly — by $1.7 billion to $32.8 billion — that meant corporations were in better financial condition at the end of 1975.

And the higher profits after adjustment for inflation meant more corporate cash to invest in the new facilities which create new jobs and help hold down prices through more effective production.

Consumer Confidence Index Rises

New York (AP) — U.S. consumer confidence continued to climb in January and February, regaining nearly all of the ground lost in the 1973-75 recession, the Conference Board reported.

The board, a nonprofit business-research group, said its confidence index rose to 93.3 in February, up more than six points since December 1975. The index stood at 96.2 in October 1973, just before the onset of the recession.

The survey, conducted for the board by National Family Opinion Inc., covers 10,000 families across the country.

Consumers are also somewhat more pleased with current economic conditions.

Capricious Enforcement

At a federal court trial in Lincoln this week, former employees testified about specific instances of gambling — one at which uniformed city police officers observed — at private clubs here.

The lawsuit was brought by John Long, owner of a business in which he tried to establish a private club where members could play poker and other games for money. Long contends that local authorities forced him to close down his club, but that they were not enforcing anti-gambling laws at other private clubs. Long is seeking $115,000 in damages on the grounds that his constitutional right to equal protection of the law has been violated.

The merits of the case aside, private club gambling in Lincoln is common knowledge. Anybody who claims there are not games of chance almost every day and lots of gambling by lots of people on various stag nights is fooling himself, and not too many other people.

And when local officials shut down one game-of-chance operation against an historical background of permissiveness when it comes to the established private clubs, then the law is not being enforced equally.

The situation points out that:

—Capricious enforcement of the law is a gross hypocrisy

—Social gambling is accepted by people here and the laws should be changed to permit it.

Gratitude Is In Order

The Legislature this week socked outdoorsmen with a hefty hike in hunting and fishing fees and hunters and fishermen should be grateful for it.

The added revenue — estimated to be more than $900,000 annually — will go into the pot with federal matching money to be used for purchasing land to protect wildlife habitat. The first priority is to maintain remaining wetlands in Nebraska.

On January 1 next year hunting licenses will go up $2, fishing license will increase by $3.50, the cost of the combination license will jump by $5.50 and the $1 upland game stamp will be replaced with a $7.50 habitat stamp. Fees for visitors will be even more.

Sportsmen, say thanks to your senators.

With habitat falling victim to the economics of private land ownership, the days of hunting and fishing as we know it would be numbered unless something like an accelerated program of habitat preservation is not undertaken.

Boosalis Doesn't Say "Boo"

Mayor Helen Boosalis, elected at least in part because voters perceived her to be an "open" politician, mildly embarrassed her constituency last week at her news conference.

She refused to answer many questions. The refusals came in the various phrases that politicians use to hedge and protect, but the translation was: "I think I'd just as soon stay out of trouble and avoid that issue."

They were not the answers of an "open" city administrator, especially when accompanied by a sly wink and smile.

The questions were neither tough nor surprising. "Should the city take over humane society duties?" "Do you think the proposed massed gathering ordinance is too restrictive?" "Do you have any names to suggest for the vacancy on the Lincoln Electric System board?" "Do you agree with the police decision to use hollow point bullets?" (She did agree but refused to elaborate).

Yes, dodging questions is an issue because it is symptomatic of the advance of a serious political disease: fear. There are more diplomatic words than "fear", but they all mean the same thing.

State Gag Order Called 'Horrendous'

WASHINGTON — If you are not aware of the horrendous Nebraska gag order, you haven't been paying attention.

Seldom has the press reacted more violently to a perceived threat to its First Amendment protection. Literally dozens of publications, networks and trade organizations are urging the Supreme Court to strike down a restrictive order of the Nebraska courts and, most particularly, a ruling by Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun supporting that order.

As might be expected, this is not an issue on which the thunderers of the press have been reticent. It has brought together such unlikely allies as columnists Tom Wicker and James J. Kilpatrick, who normally don't play on the same side of the street.

Kilpatrick says that what is involved here is "a threat not only to a free press but ultimately to the right of a free people as a whole." Wicker says Blackmun's sanction of the Nebraska gag, if allowed to stand, "would empower the courts to set aside the First Amendment." Those comments capture both the thrust and the tone of the news business's position.

To refresh your memory, here is what all the fuss is about:

In the wake of a sensational mass murder in a small Nebraska town last fall, a county judge ordered the press not to report anything but the bare essentials of the case. His ban included the fact that a confession had been made, material brought out in a preliminary hearing in open court and even the fact of the gag order itself.

The purpose, he said, was to protect the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to a trial by an impartial jury.

The press reacted quickly. An appeal was soon before Justice Blackmun, who is the supervisory justice for the area including Nebraska. Blackmun upheld the main provisions of the county judge's order. So did the Nebraska Supreme Court.

The gag order remained in effect until a jury was selected and sequestered. The man charged with the murders was tried and found guilty. In the meantime, the case was brought before the full United States Supreme Court, which will hear arguments from both sides next month.

I will not attempt to present the press's side here, although I support it. Others have stated it more knowledgeably and more skillfully than I could.

However, I would like to register my concern about one aspect of this case.

As a journalist who has more contact with the public than many of my colleagues, I sense an impatience with the press, and a growing distrust. I think this mood, fostered by the current zeal to investigate and expose, figures in the Nebraska case in two ways.

First, I think it is one of the causes of the proliferation of judicial restraining orders, restrictions on police records, legislation designed to protect governmental secrecy and the like.

Finley Peter Dunne, writing as Mr. Dooley, once said, "The Supreme Court follows the election results." I would expand on that to say that public officials, including judges, sense the public mood and react to it. And the public mood today seems to be that perhaps the press has gotten too big for its britches.

Second, I think this same mood may cause the public to see this case as simply a self-serving attempt by the fat cats of the press to defend their right to publish what they please — all in pursuit of the buck.

Some of the stridency of the press's response to the Nebraska gag order may reflect an awareness that it is fighting its battle alone, without the backing of the public.

But let no one be misled. Judicial gag orders do far more than restrain the excesses of journalists. They put a chill on a basic concept of our free society that justice is administered out in the open.

The root significance of the Nebraska case was best stated not by a constitutional lawyer but by the editor of a small newspaper — the Anniston (Ala.) Star. In a letter which appears in one of the briefs now before the Supreme Court, H. Brandt Ayers said:

"... If the already irresistible powers of the judiciary are swollen by absorbing an additional function, that of government censor, the chilling effect upon vigorous public debate would be deepest in the thousands of small towns where independent, locally owned, daily and weekly newspapers are published."

"Our papers are not read in the White House, the Congress, the Supreme Court or by network news executives. The causes for which we contend and the problems we face are invisible to the world of power and intellect. We have no in-house legal staff. We retain no great, national law firms. We do not have spacious profits with which to defend ourselves and our principles, all the way to the Supreme Court, each and every time we feel them to be under attack."

"Our only alternative is obedient silence. You hear us when we speak now. Who will notice if we are silenced? The small town press will be the unknown soldier of a war between the First and Sixth Amendments, a war that should never have been declared, and can still be avoided..."

Let The Voter Beware

NEW YORK — As an exercise in electing somebody, the presidential campaign is slowly beginning to do its work. As an exercise in political education, it is not only a bust, as are most campaigns; but this one may be a disaster.

It's not that the candidates are avoiding the issues. There are candidate forums, position papers, news conferences and "major speeches" galore. The problem is that so much of what is being said is actively misleading, demagogic or non-sensical. Here are just a few examples:

—"Government" and "Washington" are being criticized as if they were extraneous forces that are all bad; the impression being fostered across the country is that "government" is something foreign, located in a protected fortress called "Washington," where nobody can get at it. "Government" is described as in every case too big, too unresponsive, too costly, too complicated and too self-serving.

Government is sometimes all of those things, but so is private enterprise: so, sometimes, are churches, universities and political campaigns. And like all of those, government sometimes helps people (say, the blacks in the South who have been enabled to register and vote because of federal intervention) and sometimes succeeds in its purposes (for example, making private home ownership possible for millions of Americans with moderate incomes). The federal budget as a proportion of Gross National Product, moreover, has held steady at about 20% since 1953, and federal debt has actually dropped from 82% of GNP in 1950 to 26% in 1974.

We are also being taught ad nauseam that Soviet-American detente is a "one-way street" running toward Moscow. President Ford has abandoned the word, leaving defense of it and the concept to Secretary Kissinger, who is actually considered "too soft" by Ronald Reagan and Henry Jackson. Yet, no one has detailed how the Soviets have gotten more out of detente than Americans have — save, perhaps, for American grain sales, and even that would be disputed in the Farm Belt.

If Jackson or Reagan were president and if these were the darkest days of the Cold War, would either have been able to roll back Soviet-Cuban intervention in Angola? Not unless we had the financing and organizing armies, as in Laos, where the agency managed at enormous cost to delay the inevitable for a few years. And Jackson's tough-guy talk about using trade policy to force the Soviets to relax their restrictions on emigration produced nothing last year but Soviet repudiation of trade agreements.

—"Forced busing to achieve racial balance" was denounced in the Massachusetts primary — as it will be in any other states where Jackson and George Wallace compete and where there's even the shadow of a busing controversy to exploit. The denunciations tend to drown out anyone who tries to explain that busing is sometimes the only means of achieving not racial balance but an end to rank racial discrimination — as in Boston.

—Reagan has declaimed so fiercely about this nation's God-given right to hang on forever to part of another country — Panama — that the Ford administration has pushed the long-stalled negotiations on a new Canal Zone treaty even further out of sight. And to the extent Reagan was persuasive, there will be even more resistance in this country to a new treaty.

—On the one hand, unjustified promises are being made that Social Security benefits can keep going up, general tax revenues can be tapped to pay for them, and there will be no real cost to anyone, while on the other hand unjustified fears have been roused as to the ultimate financial integrity of the Social Security trust fund. In fact, there is ample time to make reforms necessary to keep the trust fund sound, but those reforms are going to cost a lot, no matter which of several possibilities is adopted.

—Ronald Reagan's plan to hand $90 billion worth of federal social programs back to the states has been tagged for the fraud it is, but Gerald Ford is so far getting away with his own con job, which holds that since the economy is on an upward trend, the economy is sound, and therefore he deserves the credit for bringing the nation out of a recession without reviving inflation.

Ford has in fact brought us to something over 7% unemployment, with the heaviest burden of that achievement falling on the most disadvantaged Americans, and nothing in his economic policy is likely to bring substantial improvement for years to come, or to stave off the inflation that would be threatened by a faster and fuller recovery.

(c) New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Whatever the outcome of the election in November, the new Congress will have quite a different look and it promises to be a less happy look. People who have been in service so long that they have become institutions will be missing and they will be missed.

First and foremost is majority leader of the Senate, Mike Mansfield of Montana. Young hotbloods in his party deride him as being no leader at all. But by quiet persuasion he has done as much as could be done with the disparate majority over which he theoretically presides.

It was silly to complain that Mansfield was not a Lyndon Johnson who led by knocking heads together and by following the wishes of the Republican president, Dwight Eisenhower, and his secretary of the treasury, George Humphrey. Mansfield's integrity, honesty and gentle wisdom have been a superb example of leadership to the Congress and to the nation, especially in times when standards of conduct were falling to shocking levels.

At least three and possibly four senators are already vying for Mansfield's place. The likely winner is Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, the present majority whip. If he becomes leader, he will rule with an iron hand and not bother about a velvet glove.

On the other side of the aisle, the minority leader, Sen. Hugh Scott, is also departing. It is unfortunate that at the end of a long career, fraught with grim difficulties in the Watergate period, the payments he received from Gulf Oil should have been given such prominence. A man of cultivation and decency, he smarted from the barbed attacks by some of his fellow Republicans.

In the House of Representatives, some veterans long on experience and ability are quitting, having felt a sense of futility in that unwieldy body. Money, too, has been a factor — the high cost of campaigns every two years, the necessity to keep a residence both in their respective districts and in Washington and the way inflation has eaten into a salary of $42,500 despite the perks that an incumbent enjoys.

In the House, Speaker Carl Albert has been an uncertain and indecisive leader. The current belief is that he will follow Mansfield's example and announce that he does not intend to seek re-election.

Albert's probable successor is the present majority whip, Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill Jr. Tip is a hearty Irish politician out of the Boston tradition. Whether he is stern enough to rule over a conglomerate House in which the freshman class that came in 1974 has kicked over some of the old rules and sacred traditions is a question troubling some of his colleagues.

The record of the 94th Congress as a whole has been a sorry one. A large Democratic majority has been frustrated time and again by the vetoes of a Republican President. Energy and other vital issues hung fire for months on end.

The question for the future is, will Ford — if he is elected in the event that the Democrats get in such a bind they cannot agree on a candidate — once again confront a Democratic Congress. My own guess is that present belief is that he will follow Mansfield's example and announce that he does not intend to seek re-election.

If the same situation is to prevail, then, Mansfield, with his resolute yet gentle persuasion, will be missed more than ever. He has always been ready to talk with the President and members of the administration without surrendering his own convictions. His 34 years, first in the House and then in the Senate, is a long term of service, particularly when that term stretched through some of the most trying times this nation has endured.

Mansfield has a bosom friend of former Sen. George Aiken, the veteran Vermont. They had breakfast together almost every morning which was an opportunity to sort out the problems of the day on the Senate floor. Beginning with the Vermont State House of Representatives and going on to election to the United States Senate in 1940, Aiken's service was longer even than that of Mansfield and he felt the same desire Mansfield now does to have a few peaceful years on the farm he loves at Putney.

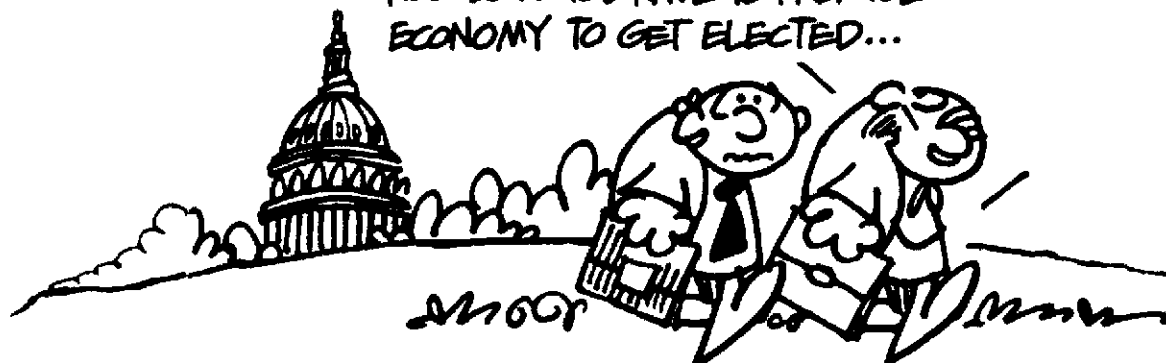

Able and intelligent men in both bodies get a feeling of frustration at times like these. Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri is one of the first-rate men who has never received sufficient recognition for his prolonged and highly knowledgeable efforts to reform the House. The real handicap is, of course, the two-year term, but that is apparently embedded forever in the Constitution.

Capricious Enforcement

At a federal court trial in Lincoln this week, former employees testified about specific instances of gambling — one at which uniformed city police officers observed — at private clubs here.

The lawsuit was brought by John Long, owner of a business in which he tried to establish a private club where members could play poker and other games for money. Long contends that local authorities forced him to close down his club, but that they were not enforcing anti-gambling laws at other private clubs. Long is seeking $115,000 in damages on the grounds that his constitutional right to equal protection of the law has been violated.

The merits of the case aside, private club gambling in Lincoln is common knowledge. Anybody who claims there are not games of chance almost every day and lots of gambling by lots of people on various stag nights is fooling himself, and not too many other people.

And when local officials shut down one game-of-chance operation against an historical background of permissiveness when it comes to the established private clubs, then the law is not being enforced equally.

The situation points out that:

—Capricious enforcement of the law is a gross hypocrisy.

—Social gambling is accepted by people here and the laws should be changed to permit it.

Gratitude Is In Order

The Legislature this week socked outdoormen with a hefty hike in hunting and fishing fees and hunters and fishermen should be grateful for it.

The added revenue — estimated to be more than $900,000 annually — will go into the pot with federal matching money to be used for purchasing land to protect wildlife habitat. The first priority is to maintain remaining wetlands in Nebraska.

On January 1 next year hunting licenses will go up $2, fishing license will increase by $3.50, the cost of the combination license will jump by $5.50 and the $1 upland game stamp will be replaced with a $7.50 habitat stamp. Fees for visitors will be even more.

Sportsmen, say thanks to your senators.

With habitat falling victim to the economics of private land ownership, the days of hunting and fishing as we know it would be numbered unless something like an accelerated program of habitat preservation is not undertaken.

Boosalis Doesn't Say "Boo"

Mayor Helen Boosalis, elected at least in part because voters perceived her to be an "open" politician, mildly embarrassed her constituency last week at her news conference.

She refused to answer many questions. The refusals came in the various phrases that politicians use to hedge and protect, but the translation was: "I think I'd just as soon stay out of trouble and avoid that issue."

They were not the answers of an "open" city administrator, especially when accompanied by a sly wink and smile.

The questions were neither tough nor surprising. "Should the city take over humane society duties?" "Do you think the proposed massed gathering ordinance is too restrictive?" "Do you have any names to suggest for the vacancy on the Lincoln Electric System board?" "Do you agree with the police decision to use hollow point bullets?" (She did agree but refused to elaborate).

Yes, dodging questions is an issue because it is symptomatic of the advance of a serious political disease: fear. There are more diplomatic words than "fear", but they all mean the same thing.

TOM WICKER

Let The Voter Beware

NEW YORK — As an exercise in electing somebody, the presidential campaign is slowly beginning to do its work. As an exercise in political education, it is not only a bust, as are most campaigns; but this one may be a disaster.

It's not that the candidates are avoiding the issues. There are candidate forums, position papers, news conferences and "major speeches" galore. The problem is that so much of what is being said is actively misleading, demagogic or nonsensical. Here are just a few examples:

—"Government" and "Washington" are being criticized as if they were extraneous forces that are all bad; the impression being fostered across the country is that "government" is something foreign, located in a protected fortress called "Washington," where nobody can get at it. "Government" is described as in every case too big, too unresponsive, too costly, too complicated and too self-serving.

Government is sometimes all of those things, but so is private enterprise; so, sometimes, are churches, universities and political campaigns. And like all of those, government sometimes helps people (say, the blacks in the South who have been enabled to register and vote because of federal intervention) and sometimes succeeds in its purposes (for example, making private home ownership possible for millions of Americans with moderate incomes). The federal budget as a proportion of Gross National Product, moreover, has held steady at about 20% since 1953, and federal debt has actually dropped from 82% of GNP in 1950 to 26% in 1974.

We are also being taught ad nauseam that Soviet-American detente is a "one-way street" running toward Moscow. President Ford has abandoned the word, leaving defense of it and the concept to Secretary Kissinger, who is actually considered "too soft" by Ronald Reagan and Henry Jackson. Yet, no one has detailed how the Soviets have gotten more out of detente than Americans have — save, perhaps, for American grain sales, and even that would be disputed in the Farm Belt.

If Jackson or Reagan were president and if these were the darkest days of the Cold War, would either have been able to roll back Soviet-Cuban intervention in Angola? Not unless we had the financing and organizing armies, as in Laos, where the agency managed at enormous cost to delay the inevitable for a few years. And Jackson's tough-guy talk about using trade policy to force the Soviets to relax their restrictions on emigration produced nothing last year but Soviet repudiation of trade agreements.

—"Forced busing to achieve racial balance" was denounced in the Massachusetts primary — as it will be in any other states where Jackson and George Wallace compete and where there's even the shadow of a busing controversy to exploit. The denunciations tend to drown out anyone who tries to explain that busing is sometimes the only means of achieving not racial balance but an end to rank racial discrimination — as in Boston.

—Reagan has claimed so fiercely about this nation's God-given right to hang on forever to part of another country — Panama — that the Ford administration has pushed the long-stalled negotiations on a new Canal Zone treaty even further out of sight. And to the extent Reagan was persuasive, there will be even more resistance in this country to a new treaty.

—On the one hand, unjustified promises are being made that Social Security benefits can keep going up, general tax revenues can be tapped to pay for them, and there will be no real cost to anyone; while on the other hand unjustified fears have been roused as to the ultimate financial integrity of the Social Security trust fund. In fact, there is ample time to make reforms necessary to keep the trust fund sound, but those reforms are going to cost a lot, no matter which of several possibilities is adopted.

—Ronald Reagan's plan to hand $90 billion worth of federal social programs back to the states has been tagged for the fraud it is, but Gerald Ford is so far getting away with his own con job, which holds that since the economy is on an upward trend, the economy is sound, and therefore he deserves the credit for bringing the nation out of a recession without reviving inflation.

Ford has in fact brought us to something over 7% unemployment, with the heaviest burden of that achievement falling on the most disadvantaged Americans; and nothing in his economic policy is likely to bring substantial improvement for years to come, or to stave off the inflation that would be threatened by a faster and fuller recovery.

State Gag Order Called 'Horrendous'

WASHINGTON — If you are not aware of the horrendous Nebraska gag order, you haven't been paying attention.

Seldom has the press reacted more violently to a perceived threat to its First Amendment protection. Literally dozens of publications, networks and trade organizations are urging the Supreme Court to strike down a restrictive order of the Nebraska courts and, most particularly, a ruling by Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun supporting that order.

As might be expected, this is not an issue on which the thunderers of the press have been reticent. It has brought together such unlikely allies as columnists Tom Wicker and James J. Kilpatrick, who normally don't play on the same side of the street.

Kilpatrick says that what is involved here is "a threat not only to a free press but ultimately to the right of a free people as a whole." Wicker says Blackmun's sanction of the Nebraska gag, if allowed to stand, "would empower the courts to set aside the First Amendment." Those comments capture both the thrust and the tone of the news business's position.

To refresh your memory, here is what all the fuss is about:

In the wake of a sensational mass murder in a small Nebraska town last fall, a county judge ordered the press not to report anything but the bare essentials of the case. His ban included the fact that a confession had been made, material brought out in a preliminary hearing in open court and even the fact of the gag order itself.

The purpose, he said, was to protect the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to a trial by an impartial jury.

The press reacted quickly. An appeal was soon before Justice Blackmun, who is the supervisory justice for the area including Nebraska. Blackmun upheld the main provisions of the county judge's order. So did the Nebraska Supreme Court.

The gag order remained in effect until a jury was selected and sequestered. The man charged with the murders was tried and found guilty. In the meantime, the case was brought before the full United States Supreme Court, which will hear arguments from both sides next month.

I will not attempt to present the press's side here, although I support it. Others have stated it more knowledgeably and more skillfully than I could.

However, I would like to register my concern about one aspect of this case.

As a journalist who has more contact with the public than many of my colleagues, I sense an impatience with the press, and a growing distrust. I think this mood, fostered by the current zeal to investigate and expose, figures in the Nebraska case in two ways.

First, I think it is one of the causes of the proliferation of judicial restraining orders, restrictions on police records, legislation designed to protect governmental secrecy and the like.

Finley Peter Dunne, writing as Mr. Dooley, once said, "The Supreme Court follows the election results." I would expand on that to say that public officials, including judges, sense the public mood and react to it. And the public mood today seems to be that perhaps the press has gotten too big for its britches.

Second, I think this same mood may cause the public to see this case as simply a self-serving attempt by the fat cats of the press to defend their right to publish what they please — all in pursuit of the buck.

Some of the stridency of the press's response to the Nebraska gag order may reflect an awareness that it is fighting its battle alone, without the backing of the public.

But let no one be misled. Judicial gag orders do far more than restrain the excesses of journalists. They put a chill on a basic concept of our free society: that justice is administered out in the open.

The root significance of the Nebraska case was best stated not by a constitutional lawyer but by the editor of a small newspaper — the Anniston (Ala.) Star. In a letter which appears in one of the briefs now before the Supreme Court, H. Brandt Ayers said:

"... If the already irresistible powers of the judiciary are swollen by absorbing an additional function, that of government censor, the chilling effect upon vigorous public debate would be deepest in the thousands of small towns where independent, locally owned, daily and weekly newspapers are published.

"Our papers are not read in the White House, the Congress, the Supreme Court or by network news executives. The causes for which we contend and the problems we face are invisible to the world of power and intellect. We have no in-house legal staff. We retain no great, national law firms. We do not have spacious profits with which to defend ourselves and our principles, all the way to the Supreme Court, each and every time we feel them to be under attack.

"Our only alternative is obedient silence. You hear us when we speak now. Who will notice if we are silenced? The small town press will be the unknown soldier of a war between the First and Sixth Amendments, a war that should never have been declared, and can still be avoided ..."

The Changing Face Of Congress

HUGH SCOTT

CARL ALBERT

MIKE MANSFIELD

WASHINGTON — Whatever the outcome of the election in November, the new Congress will have quite a different look and it promises to be a less happy look. People who have been in service so long that they have become institutions will be missing and they will be missed.

First and foremost is majority leader of the Senate, Mike Mansfield of Montana. Young hotbloods in his party deride him as being no leader at all. But by quiet persuasion he has done as much as could be done with the disparate majority over which he theoretically presides.

It was silly to complain that Mansfield was not a Lyndon Johnson who led by knocking heads together and by following the wishes of the Republican president, Dwight Eisenhower, and his secretary of the treasury, George Humphrey. Mansfield's integrity, honesty and gentle wisdom have been a superb example of leadership to the Congress and to the nation, especially in times when standards of conduct were falling to shocking levels.

the small society

At least three and possibly four senators are already vying for Mansfield's place. The likely winner is Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, the present majority whip. If he becomes leader, he will rule with an iron hand and not bother about a velvet glove.

On the other side of the aisle, the minority leader, Sen. Hugh Scott, is also departing. It is unfortunate that at the end of a long career, fraught with grim difficulties in the Watergate period, the payments he received from Gulf Oil should have been given such prominence. A man of cultivation and decency, he smarted from the barbed attacks by some of his fellow Republicans.

In the House, Speaker Carl Albert has been an uncertain and indecisive leader. The current belief is that he will follow Mansfield's example and announce that he does not intend to seek re-election.

Albert's probable successor is the present majority whip, Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill Jr. Tip is a hearty Irish politician out of the Boston tradition. The question for the future is, will Ford — if he is elected in the event that the Democrats get in such a bind they cannot agree on a candidate — once again confront a Democratic Congress. My own guess is that present Democratic majorities will hold. The Republican problem has always been one of finding men willing to run.

If the same situation is to prevail, then, Mansfield, with his resolute yet gentle persuasion, will be missed more than ever. He has always been ready to talk with the President and members of the administration without surrendering his own convictions. His 34 years, first in the House and then in the Senate, is a long term of service, particularly when that term stretched through some of the most trying times this nation has endured.

Parking Study Suggests Double Meter Rates And Triple Fines

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Double parking meter rates and triple the parking violation fines, suggests a consulting firm studying Lincoln's downtown parking situation.

These enforcement changes are necessary to eliminate the habitual violator, particularly the downtown employees who use short term curb parking all day, according to the preliminary study by the Kansas City consulting firm.

There is adequate parking space in the downtown core area when off-street parking is included, but there is a problem with short-term on-street parking, said Herbert Johnson of Robert Holsinger and Johnson, Brickell, Mulcahy and Associates, Inc.

The initial survey showed that between 88% and 94.5% of the curb spaces are used, "a very high percentage," Johnson said.

11% Stayed Longer

But 11.93% (1,395) of the cars stayed for longer than four hours, and an additional 1,005 vehicles parked illegally, in loading zones, along red lines or near intersections, the study showed.

Many of the long-term curb parkers were downtown employees and government vehicles, Johnson said.

And there are also men from "prestige offices along O St. going out to feed the meters for their Cadillacs," he said.

And the survey team noticed organized employee efforts "to look out for meter maids and feed curb side meters," Johnson said during a presentation to the Downtown Advisory Committee.

'Enforcement Change Needed'

Enforcement policies are going to have to change in order to free these curb spaces for the average person who has business or shopping downtown, he said.

With a nickel-an-hour meter fee and a $1 violation fine, it is cheaper to park at the curb than in off-street lots or garages, Johnson pointed out.

In fact, a check of the 1974 parking tickets showed that the average long-term curbside parker paid $5.40 a month, including fines and nickles, he said.

The consulting firm has recommended that the meter fees be increased to a dime an hour and the fine to $3 with a $5 fine if the violation is not paid within 30 days.

Currently the $1 fine doubles if it is not paid within 5 days.

1-Hour Meters Suggested

The consulting firm is also recommending that all meters be changed to a one hour limit ("to discourage employee meter feeding"), with a two-hour maximum at any space.

Study Checked Out One Who Checks Up

The largest group of downtown parking violators are employees and government workers, according to the $77,000 study. And the first violator that the survey team checked up on turned out to be an FBI agent.

"Maybe we should report that to the Church Committee," (the senate group studying U.S. intelligence operations) a consultant suggested.

Currently the central downtown area has metered spaces ranging from 30 minutes to two hours.

Increased meter rates could also be used to help finance the Centrum project, a 1,000-car parking garage.

With better enforcement and better use of on-street short-term parking, the off-street lots and garages would probably convert to a more long-term parking for employees, Johnson said.

The survey showed that even at peak periods there were 1,206 spaces available in off-street parking lots.

Average 45 Minutes

The study showed that the average downtown stay (for on-street parking) was 45 minutes and that curb slots served an average of 9.82 cars during normal business hours.

Downtown merchants at DAC took issue with some of Johnson's suggestions and comments during the Friday afternoon meeting.

Johnson suggested that downtown employers could furnish employee parking to help eliminate employee use of metered spaces.

"This cost would destroy the small downtown retailer, said John Campbell, president of Miller and Paine. In fact, Campbell said, he could not afford to provide parking for his downtown employees.

Pessimism Dismays Merchants

And the downtown merchants who are anticipating the Centrum project will bring increased customers and sales were also dismayed at Johnson's pessimistic attitude about the additional parking.

"Just building another parking lot (the Centrum) is not going to initially bring more people downtown," Johnson told the group.

"I can't believe that," said Jim Ebel, president of KOLN-TV.

People's shopping habits will have to be changed and more shops will have to open up in downtown to bring any major increase in downtown trips, Johnson said.

"People are not going to immediately going to jump back to downtown. It's going to take time," Johnson said.

Some DAC members also said an increase in parking fines would simply discourage downtown shopping.

Gambling Enforcement Suit Dismissed In Court

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

U.S. District Court Judge Warren K. Urborn Friday dismissed a suit charging that gambling laws have been unfairly enforced in Lincoln.

Urborn said no evidence was presented that the Checkmate Club had been placed in an "unreasonable" category and treated differently than other private clubs in Lincoln.

He noted that former police chief Joseph T. Carroll, one of the defendants in the case, testified that he made a distinction in law enforcement between those who were making a living from gambling and those who were not.

"Is that classification unreasonable? I think that as a matter of law, I must say no," Urborn said in dismissing the case after the plaintiff's attorneys rested their case after one and one-half days of trial.

Games Played For Money

John Long, owner of the Golden Cue-Checkmate Club, claimed that authorities forced him in 1973 to close a private club where members could, for a 75c an hour charge, play poker and other games for money.

He was seeking $115,000 for violation of his constitutional rights on the grounds authorities treated him differently than other private clubs.

In testimony Thursday, James Clark, a former bartender at the Lincoln Country Club, and Mrs. Kay Winthro, a former cocktail waitress at the Elks Club, had testified on gambling activities at the two clubs.

Both said they had seen crap tables, card games and money passing from hand to hand at all-time stages at the Clubs. Mrs. Winthro also said a roulette wheel was in operation when she served drinks at an Elks Club stage.

Urborn Believed Testimony

Urborn, in making his ruling, noted that he believed all the testimony in the case, but indicated authorities had the right to concentrate on those making money from gambling. Long testified he had earned $1,069 operating the club.

Urborn said that was reason alone enough to warrant dismissal of the case, "but there's more."

Urborn noted that Long was seeking monetary damages, not that others be prosecuted, or to stop authorities from prosecuting him.

In order to collect monetary damages, Urborn said, Long's attorneys had to prove that the acts were intentional and purposeful. They had not, Urborn said.

"Granted its a difficult standard to reach," Urborn said.

"But persons in public positions must be given elbow room to use discretion. If they are held to too high a standard, they will be hesitant to perform their duties."

Discretion 'Better'

The law (from other court decisions) says that it is better to give them that discretion, even if they don't do their job well... than to suffocate them, Urborn said.

"It must be obvious that it is impossible to arrest every person guilty of violating a gambling statute," Urborn said.

"Should police officers be deployed across the city to march into offices on Saturday mornings to see if there is betting on office football pools?" Urborn asked.

"Professional gambling is more serious to society than non-professional gambling," Urborn said.

Urborn also ruled that former Lancaster County Attorney Paul Douglas, now state attorney general, who was the other defendant in the case, had absolute immunity in this case because of a March 2 decision by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Urborn said Douglas was acting within the legally protected scope of his duties in determining whether to prosecute and whether to issue a warning first.

People's Action Aims To Save Urban Areas

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

A coordinator of a Chicago-based people's action group told members of Lincoln's neighborhood organizations Friday night that it's time to reverse the trends of "disposable concepts" and save the major urban areas of this country.

Shel Trapp of National People's Action told a gathering at the Malone Community Center that "if we (the U.S.) can push billions of dollars out of this country, we surely can put some back into the major urban centers."

Trapp was in Lincoln to promote the people's platform — neighborhoods first — as a plank in the major political parties in this election year. He explained the three-part platform keys on reinvestment of money into neighborhoods, correction of FHA abuse and guarantee of funds for services for senior citizens.

The major emphasis of the reinvestment, Trapp explained, would be the concept of double dollars, in the form of more matching funds for community development programs. Another feature of this part of the platform would set up a tax incentive program for financial institutions which agree to put a certain percentage of their loans into conventional mortgages on existing housing in neighborhoods.

"If we let our existing housing stock go down the tube, our children will have to live like our forefathers: in tents," Trapp said, noting that the raw materials to build new housing are becoming harder to get.

Part two of the platform calls for an end to fast foreclosures. Mortgage bankers would have to be licensed, and Housing and Urban Development Department funds for rehabilitation would have to be channeled to the area of already-abandoned HUD properties.

The guarantees to senior citizens include a call for a national generic drug act and increased appropriations of funds for new construction and rehabilitated housing for the elderly, Trapp said.

It seems unconceivable that we should let a person work for 65 years and then throw him on the scrap pile and say "If you're lucky, we'll feed you," Trapp added.

He called for local action initiated by the neighborhood groups themselves in which they seek input directly into political parties through party conventions and platform meetings.

He further called for a marriage of private and public sector money, a marriage which would result in "the kind of operation necessary to save our neighborhoods, and the future of our cities."

LES To Study Effect If No 'Tax' Required

Lincoln Electric System officials are going to study what they would do with about a million dollars if LES didn't have to make in lieu of tax payments every year.

The money is what LES would pay if it were a privately owned utility.

An amendment on the May 11 ballot would eliminate the payments LES makes to the city, county and school district. Last year LES paid $1.1 million in lieu of tax payments.

The payments increase dramatically every year, which is one reason the city administration originally proposed that all the money be funneled into the city treasury alone.

Based on projected revenues for this year, LES would pay $1.7 million.

Next year, LES would pay from $2.1 million to $2.7 million if the amendment is not approved. But 1984, LES officials estimate those in lieu of tax charges could top $6.9 million.

City officials have argued that all the dollars should be kept by the city, since LES is a city department. The county and the school district, which receives about 60% of the payments, objected to that proposal.

While some city officials recommended that all the money go to the city, the advisory Charter Revision Committee said the payments should be dropped altogether.

The committee contended the payments constitutes a hidden tax on electric ratepayers. Some members ventured the hope that

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

Psalm 2 and Acts 4:25

This question is the opening words of The Second Psalm of The Bible. God Almighty's Book and revelation of Himself to man. "A heathen is one who does not believe in The God of The Bible." They rage in order to get rid of His Moral Law, judgments, His Ten Commandments.

In Ezekiel 44:24 God says: "And in controversy they shall stand in my judgments; and they shall judge it according to my judgments, and they shall keep my laws and my statutes in all mine assemblies, and they shall follow my sabbaths." Those interested are invited to consider some of God's judgments regarding worship, as there is considerable controversy in this matter these days.

There was a man named Cain. He came to worship God and brought an offering. God did not want what he brought and would not accept it. Cain got mad. Cain killed his brother Abel. The final outcome of Cain's worship was a curse and not a blessing.—Genesis 4:3-12.

Nadab and Abihu were invited to make a command appearance before The King of Kings, Lord of Lords, even Almighty God. So with Aaron their father and Moses and seventy of the Elders of Israel they climbed Mount Sinai, and there "They saw God, and did eat and drink." After this marvelous and super-natural experience they went into the Tabernacle one day to worship. They made an offering that was unacceptable to God — an offering of "Strange Fire!" The fire of God leaped on them and burnt both to death. The outcome of their worship on that occasion was a curse, death, and not a blessing. Read about it in Exodus 24, verse 1, 9, 11; and in Leviticus 10:1-3.

King David, the man after God's heart, in moving the Ark of God had a new cart made and hitched oxen to it. God had commanded that it should be moved only on the shoulders of the priests and Levites. The oxen stumbled! An attendant named Uzza caught hold of it. God struck him dead! In Chronicles, 13th chapter. No doubt the intentions of both David and Uzza were good, but protesting of that which was sacred brought a curse instead of a blessing!

King Uzziah was one of Judah's greatest kings. He reigned fifty-two years. He sought to obey and please God and was greatly blessed, together with his people and nation. There was great prosperity, much business and great advancement made in agriculture, and especially military science, inventions and fortifications. He had a great and powerful army that put down all their enemies. His name spread far abroad over the then known world. He was respected and feared. He went into the Temple one day to worship. He forgot his place and undertook to worship in his own way, though warned and withstood by the priests. God struck him there in the Temple in his act of worship. Struck him with leprosy! He was taken out and put in a pest house where his body rotted until life left it! 2nd Chronicle, chapter 26.

Moses met God at the "Burning Bush." God said: "Put off thy shoes from thy feet, for the place where thou standest is holy."—Exodus 3:1-6. God appeared to Joshua before the city of Jericho and Joshua said: "What saith my Lord unto His servant?" The reply was "Loose thy shoe from thy foot, for the place where thou standest is holy."—Joshua 5:13-15.

The only record we have of Christ striking any one physically, when on the earth in the flesh was those whom He lashed with a whip of cords and drove out of God's House for profaning and misusing the sacred place. John 2:14-17.

Read Acts 5:1-11 and learn of another judgment of God upon a man and his wife who tried to enter the Church with ulterior motives, rather than "repentance towards God, and faith towards The Lord Jesus Christ" — both of them struck dead for "lying to The Holy Ghost" — and tempting The Spirit of The Lord! Peter said it was because Satan had filled their hearts to lie to God!

John 4:21-24: "Jesus said unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship The Father. Ye worship ye know not what — but the hour cometh and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship The Father in spirit and truth: for The Father seeketh such to worship Him. GOD IS A SPIRIT: AND THEY THAT WORSHIP HIM MUST WORSHIP HIM IN SPIRIT AND IN TRUTH."

"Keep thy foot when thou goest to The House of God," lest you offer the sacrifice of fools. Ecclesiastes 5:1.

Beware of going to worship with ulterior motives, any other than repentance towards God, and faith towards The Lord Jesus Christ! Beware of "making an offering of strange fires." Remember Nadab and Abihu!

Officials Call For Study Of Airport Noise Levels

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Local officials said Friday a wide-ranging study needs to be made on noise pollution caused by aircraft flying in and out of the Lincoln Municipal Airport.

The study would center on the amount and effect the noise has on the surrounding land. Ultimately, the study would outline procedures officials could use to control the development of the land surrounding the airport.

Members of the City Council, Airport Authority, City-County Planning Commission and the mayor tentatively agreed to make such a study after discussing how noise pollution would affect the Highlands North development.

The council originally called the meeting to discuss the Airport Authority's concern that noise easements would not be granted by the Highlands' developers.

Runway Near Housing

The Highlands is a proposed 1,100-acre residential-commercial-industrial community which would be built northeast of the airport. Airport personnel point out that the noise level lines should be drawn.

Officials acknowledged that the delineation of those lines is a problem. As Planning Director Doug Brogden put it, "It's all right to live on one side of the line, but on the other side it isn't."

Brogden said a staff review already is underway to study noise pollution, but that review is not of the magnitude envisioned by the council, mayor and Airport Authority.

Could Cost $500,000

Such a comprehensive study could cost between $300,000 and $500,000, reported Reid Charles, the mayor's administrative director.

The officials directed City Atty. Charles Humble and Airport Authority legal counsel Chancey Barney to find out if federal funds would be available for the study.

The group said the study would help officials plan where to put other developments in northwest Lincoln and help avoid similar snags encountered with the Highlands project.

While the officials pursue the study, the City Council said the authority should proceed with its negotiations with the Highlands' developers to work out the noise easements there.

Parking Study Suggests Double Meter Rates And Triple Fines

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Double parking meter rates and triple the parking violation fines, suggests a consulting firm studying Lincoln's downtown parking situation.

These enforcement changes are necessary to eliminate the habitual violator, particularly the downtown employees who use short term curb parking all day, according to the preliminary study by the Kansas City consulting firm.

There is adequate parking space in the downtown core area when off-street parking is included, but there is a problem with short-term on-street parking, said Herbert Johnson of Robert Holsinger and Johnson, Brickell, Mulcahy and Associates, Inc.

The initial survey showed that between 88% and 94.5% of the curb spaces are used, "a very high percentage," Johnson said.

11% Stayed Longer

But 11.93% (1,395) of the cars stayed for longer than four hours, and an additional 1,008 vehicles parked illegally, in loading zones, along red lines or near intersections, the study showed.

Many of the long-term curb parkers were downtown employees and government vehicles, Johnson said.

And there are also men from "prestige offices along O St. going out to feed the meters for their Cadillacs," he said.

And the survey team noticed organized employee efforts "to look out for meter maids and feed curb side meters," Johnson said during a presentation to the Downtown Advisory Committee.

'Enforcement Change Needed'

Enforcement policies are going to have to change in order to free these curb spaces for the average person who has business or shopping downtown, he said.

With a nicker-an-hour meter fee and a $1 violation fine, it is cheaper to park at the curb than in off-street lots or garages, Johnson pointed out.

In fact, a check of the 1974 parking tickets showed that the average long-term curb parker paid $5.40 a month, including fines and nickles, he said.

The consulting firm has recommended that the meter fees be increased to a dime an hour and the fine to $3 with a $5 fine if the violation is not paid within 30 days.

Currently the $1 fine doubles if it is not paid within 5 days.

1-Hour Meters Suggested

The consulting firm is also recommending that all meters be changed to a one hour limit ("to discourage employee meter feeding"), with a two-hour maximum at any space.

Study Checked Out One Who Checks Up

The largest group of downtown parking violators are employees and government workers, according to the $77,000 study. And the first violator that the survey team checked up on turned out to be an FBI agent.

"Maybe we should report that to the Church Committee," (the senate group studying U.S. intelligence operations) a consultant suggested.

Currently the central downtown area has metered spaces ranging from 30 minutes to two hours.

Increased meter rates could also be used to help finance the Centrum project, a 1,000-car parking garage.

With better enforcement and better use of on-street short-term parking, the off-street lots and garages would probably convert to a more long-term parking for employees, Johnson said.

The survey showed that even at peak periods there were 1,206 spaces available in off-street parking lots.

Average 45 Minutes

The study showed that the average downtown stay (for on-street parking) was 45 minutes and that curb slots served an average of 9.82 cars during normal business hours.

Downtown merchants at DAC took issue with some of Johnson's suggestions and comments during the Friday afternoon meeting.

Johnson suggested that downtown employers could furnish employee parking to help eliminate employee use of metered spaces.

"This cost would destroy the small downtown retailer, said John Campbell, president of Miller and Paine. In fact, Campbell said, he could not afford to provide parking for his downtown employees.

Pessimism Dismays Merchants

And the downtown merchants who are anticipating the Centrum project will bring increased customers and sales were also dismayed at Johnson's pessimistic attitude about the additional parking.

"Just building another parking lot (the Centrum) is not going to initially bring more people downtown," Johnson told the group.

"I can't believe that," said Jim Ebel, president of KOLN-TV.

People's shopping habits will have to be changed and more shops will have to open up in downtown to bring any major increase in downtown trips, Johnson said.

"People are not going to immediately going to jump back to downtown. It's going to take time," Johnson said.

Some DAC members also said an increase in parking fines would simply discourage downtown shopping.

Gambling Enforcement Suit Dismissed In Court

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

U.S. District Court Judge Warren K. Urbom Friday dismissed a suit charging that gambling laws have been unfairly enforced in Lincoln.

Urbom said no evidence was presented that the Checkmate Club had been placed in an "unreasonable" category and treated differently than other private clubs in Lincoln.

He noted that former police chief Joseph T. Carroll, one of the defendants in the case, testified that he made a distinction in law enforcement between those who were making a living from gambling and those who were not.

"Is that classification unreasonable? I think that as a matter of law, I must say no," Urbom said in dismissing the case after the plaintiff's attorneys rested their case after one and one-half days of trial.

Games Played For Money

John Long, owner of the Golden Cue-Checkmate Club, claimed that authorities forced him in 1973 to close a private club where members could, for a 75¢ an hour charge, play poker and other games for money.

He was seeking $115,000 for violation of his constitutional rights on the grounds authorities treated him differently than other private clubs.

In testimony Thursday, James Clark, a former bartender at the Lincoln Country Club, and Mrs. Kay Winthro, a former cocktail waitress at the Elks Club, had testified on gambling activities at the two clubs.

Both said they had seen crap tables, card games and money passing from hand to hand at all-time stags at the Clubs. Mrs. Winthro also said a roulette wheel was in operation when she served drinks at an Elks Club stag.

Urbom Believed Testimony Urbom, in making his ruling, noted that he believed all the testimony in the case, but indicated authorities had the right to concentrate on those making money from gambling. Long testified he had earned $1,069 operating the club.

Urbom said that was reason alone enough to warrant dismissal of the case, "but there's more."

Urbom noted that Long was seeking monetary damages, not that others be prosecuted, or to stop authorities from prosecuting him.

In order to collect monetary damages, Urbom said, Long's attorneys had to prove that the acts were intentional and purposeful. They had not, Urbom said.

"Granted its a difficult standard to reach," Urbom said. "But persons in public positions must be given elbow room to use discretion. If they are held to too high a standard, they will be hesitant to perform their duties."

Discretion 'Better'

The law (from other court decisions) says that it is better to give them that discretion, even if they don't do their job well... than to suffocate them, Urbom said.

"It must be obvious that it is impossible to arrest every person guilty of violating a gambling statute," Urbom said.

"Should police officers be deployed across the city to march into offices on Saturday mornings to see if there is betting on office football pools?" Urbom asked.

"Professional gambling is more serious to society than non-professional gambling," Urbom said.

Urbom also ruled that former Lancaster County Attorney Paul Douglas, now state attorney general, who was the other defendant in the case, had absolute immunity in this case because of a March 2 decision by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Urbom said Douglas was acting within the legally protected scope of his duties in determining whether to prosecute and whether to issue a warning first.

People's Action Aims To Save Urban Areas

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

A coordinator of a Chicago-based people's action group told members of Lincoln's neighborhood organizations Friday night that it's time to reverse the trends of "disposable concrete" and save the major urban areas of this country.

Shel Trapp of National People's Action told a gathering at the Malone Community Center that "if we (the U.S.) can push billions of dollars out of this country, we surely can put some back into the major urban centers."

Trapp was in Lincoln to promote the people's platform — neighborhoods first — as a plank in the major political parties in this election year. He explained the three-part platform keys on reinvestment of money into neighborhoods, correction of FHA abuse and guarantee of funds for services for senior citizens.

The major emphasis of the reinvestment, Trapp explained, would be the concept of double dollars, in the form of more matching funds for community development programs. Another feature of this part of the platform would set up a tax incentive program for financial institutions which agree to put a certain percentage of their loans into conventional mortgages on existing housing in neighborhoods.

"If we let our existing housing stock go down the tube, our children will have to live like our forefathers: in tents," Trapp said, noting that the raw materials to build new housing are becoming harder to get.

Part two of the platform calls for an end to fast foreclosures. Mortgage bankers would have to be licensed, and Housing and Urban Development Department funds for rehabilitation would have to be channeled to the area of already-abandoned HUD properties.

The guarantees to senior citizens include a call for a national generic drug act and increased appropriations of funds for new construction and rehabilitated housing for the elderly, Trapp said.

"It seems inconceivable that we should let a person work for 65 years and then throw him on the scrap pile and say 'If you're lucky, we'll feed you'," Trapp added.

He called for local action initiated by the neighborhood groups themselves in which they seek input directly into political parties through party conventions and platform meetings.

He further called for a marriage of private and public sector money, a marriage which would result in "the kind of operation necessary to save our neighborhoods, and the future of our cities."

LES To Study Effect If No 'Tax' Required

Lincoln Electric System officials are going to study what they would do with about a million dollars if LES didn't have to make in lieu of tax payments every year.

The money is what LES would pay if it were a privately owned utility.

An amendment on the May 11 ballot would eliminate the payments LES makes to the city, county and school district. Last year LES paid $1.1 million in lieu of tax payments.

The payments increase dramatically every year, which is one reason the city administration originally proposed that all the money be funneled into the city treasury alone.

Based on projected revenues for this year, LES would pay $1.7 million.

Next year, LES would pay from $2.1 million to $2.7 million if the amendment is not approved. But 1984, LES officials estimate those in lieu of tax charges could top $6.9 million.

City officials have argued that all the dollars should be kept by the city, since LES is a city department. The county and the school district, which receives about 60% of the payments, objected to that proposal.

While some city officials recommended that all the money go to the city, the advisory Charter Revision Committee said the payments should be dropped altogether.

The committee contended the payments constitutes a hidden tax on electric ratepayers. Some members ventured the hope that if LES kept the million dollars it does out every year, electric rate increases could be held down.

The City Council finally placed an amendment on the ballot which would eliminate that tax.

LES Administrator Walt Canney told the LES Administrative Board he will analyze what effect the amendment would have on LES revenues and electric rates. Board members said LES's answer to that question may determine how people vote on the amendment.

In other business the LES Board went into executive session to continue discussions on finding new office space in the downtown area. The board authorized a committee to proceed with negotiations with several building owners. The lease on the building LES rents at 14th and O Streets expires in August.

Poor Nations Got Poorer

London (AP) — The high cost of oil and other balance of payments troubles plunged the poorer nations of the world $35 billion into the red in 1975, Commonwealth economic experts said.

The group compared this to a total deficit of developing nations of only $10 billion in 1972, before the oil price boosts.

They forecast that it would stay at $35 billion for at least the next two years.

The group of 10 experts set up at Kingston, Jamaica, last year issued a summary of a report sent to Commonwealth prime ministers on its survey of balance of payment problems.

Officials Call For Study Of Airport Noise Levels

By LYNN ZERSCHLING

Local officials said Friday a wide-ranging study needs to be made on noise pollution caused by aircraft flying in and out of the Lincoln Municipal Airport.

The study would center on the amount and effect the noise has on the surrounding land. Ultimately, the study would outline procedures officials could use to control the development of the land surrounding the airport.

Members of the City Council, Airport Authority, City-County Planning Commission and the mayor tentatively agreed to make such a study after discussing how noise pollution would affect the Highlands North development.

The council originally called the meeting to discuss the Airport Authority's concern that noise easements would not be granted by the Highlands' developers.

Runway Near Housing

The Highlands is a proposed 1,100-acre residential-commercial-industrial community which would be built northeast of the airport. Airport personnel point out that the shorter, general aviation runway will be within 2,500 feet of some of the Highlands' housing.

Authority board members are concerned that Lincoln's airport might be held liable by future homeowners for noise and damages caused by low flying aircraft.

Board Chairman Fred Eiche remarked, "An airport is not a good neighbor for housing."

Airport Authority members said they met this week with the Highlands developers to resolve the noise easement controversy.

Problem Will Worsen Authority board member Dick Joyce said the noise problem will become worse, not better.

Joyce noted that aircraft which have "missed approaches" in landing at the airport are directed by FAA procedures to a point northeast of the airport. That flight pattern takes the planes directly over the Highlands. Air National Guard jets and other pilots routinely practice "missed approaches" flights, he said.

Highlands' attorney John Fullenkamp of Omaha assured Lincolinites the developers will grant the aviation easements. The easements would give official notice to all potential buyers that there will be airplane flights over their homes.

However, Airport Authority member Don Geis said he is concerned that the officials "have a moral obligation" to protect homeowners who may buy property in the Highlands in 10 or 20 years.

In addition to protecting the airport from potential lawsuits, Geis said he didn't want to create a slum.

Data Said Insufficient

Fullenkamp said the developers are willing to change the location of homes in the subdivision. The problem is, he pointed out, that there is insufficient technical data to determine exactly where the various noise level lines should be drawn.

Officials acknowledged that the delineation of those lines is a problem. As Planning Director Doug Brogren put it, "It's all right to live on one side of the line, but on the other side it isn't."

Brogren said a staff review already is underway to study noise pollution, but that review is not of the magnitude envisioned by the council, mayor and Airport Authority.

Could Cost $500,000 Such a comprehensive study could cost between $300,000 and $500,000, reported Reid Charles, the mayor's administrative director.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

Psalms 2 and Acts 4:25

This question is the opening words of The Second Psalm of The Bible, God Almighty's Book and revelation of Himself to man. "A heathen is one who does not believe in The God of The Bible." They rage in order to get rid of His Moral Law, Judgments, His Ten Commandments.

In Ezekiel 44:24 God says: "And in controversy they shall stand in my judgments; and they shall judge it according to my judgments; and they shall keep my laws and my statutes in all mine assemblies; and they shall hallow my sabbaths." Those interested are invited to consider some of God's judgments regarding worship, as there is considerable controversy in this matter these days:

There was a man named Cain. He came to worship God and brought an offering. God did not want what he brought and would not accept it. Cain got mad. Cain killed his brother Abel. The final outcome of Cain's worship was a curse and not a blessing.—Genesis 4:3-12.

Nadab and Abihu were invited to make a command appearance before The King of Kings, Lord of Lords, even Almighty God. So with Aaron their father and Moses and seventy of the Elders of Israel they climbed Mount Sinai, and there "They saw God, and did eat and drink." After this marvelous and super-natural experience they went into the Tabernacle one day to worship. They made an offering that was unacceptable to God — an offering of "Strange Fire!" Anxious Hours Fill The Remaining Days

The Lincoln Star 6
Saturday, March 20, 1976

Lifescope

These are a few of the thousands of elderly across the nation suffering from a disease for which, at present, there is no cure — failure of the mind in the last years of life.

"Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness, and mere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything."

—Shakespeare, "As You Like It," Act II, scene 7.

Senility: The Worst Enemy Of The Nation's Aged

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

This nation has a terminal case of aging... and the prognosis isn't good. Increasing numbers are surviving youth and middle age only to have a tarnish cast on their golden years by lessening of the brain's function and other ailments commonly defined as senility.

Perhaps because it is misunderstood and seen through different colored glasses that the "wastebasket term" senility is seen from many points of view — a clinical disease, psychological disturbance, even sociological reaction to the impact of advancing age.

Senility is, in fact, a layman's term. It is a cruel invention of a society which sees it as the inevitability of old age. It is second childhood, oblivion. It is the loss by an older person of a grip on his thoughts, his actions, his life. It is forgetfulness, confusion, disorientation.

Professionals claim it is a myth, a stereotype and a self-fulfilling prophecy.

Raised to believe that old people get senile, senior citizens are anxious that they may be slipping. Concentrating on that fear, they often become forgetful, depressed, their intelligence declines — aha, the symptoms of senility.

Martha Maseman, director of Tabitha Home's Home Health Care Program, views senility as "a symptom rather than a diagnosis." In her view, senile-related characteristics result from other problems — physical, social, emotional.

Society forces people into senile behavior, said Arthur B. Case of Services for the Aging. By mandatory retirement, the elderly are forced from their jobs and stripped of their dignity, their roles, their prestige, he said.

That and other losses — such as reaction to the loss of a mate, to being institutionalized, or even worry over making do on a fixed income — can bring on the symptoms of senility, Mrs. Maseman said.

of life in a tiny cubicle of a room or half-sits, half-lies in a wheelchair in a nursing home sunroom.

Next to her sits another woman. Who knows how old she is — 80, 90 — the years are blurred. Her eyes look up as a stranger approaches, then they return to guide her fingers as they pick, pick at an already threadbare blanket.

Their bills each month amount to as much as $1,000. Some are absorbed by families, by selling the farm, selling the house. When the cash well has gone dry they will turn to Medicaid, charitable groups, welfare.

A woman, a retired nurse who once held lives of others in her hands, is totally dependent now. Her face lights with anticipation as people approach her. With the first word, she draws back into her protective shell.

Down the hall lies a man — semi-conscious, incontinent, alone. His mind is dummed by senile dementia.

Next door a woman cries out the same word, over and over. "Help! Help!" Another woman sits in a wheelchair in front of the elevator door. "I don't want to die. I don't want to die. I don't want to die..." she singsongs pathetically.

Up and down the corridor of most nursing homes are old people, some muttering to themselves, some looking into space, some brightly, in a brief spell of lucidity, welcoming visitors.

The reactions may be voluntary, a nursing home administrator said, as a means of self-protection.

Defined in this way, senility is widespread.

Other professionals, however, view senility in its strictest sense — as a physical problem. Viewed as such it affects a small percentage of those over 65, about 1-2%.

True senility is only caused organically, observed Dr. David Peterson, director of the University of Nebraska at Omaha gerontology program.

"Cerebral arteriosclerosis is its main cause," said Sally Van Zandt, who teaches courses in middle age and aging at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. It also is due to senile brain disease or chronic brain syndrome.

In chronic brain syndrome the blood flow to the brain is reduced, leaving the brain to starve for nutrients and food, Peterson explained. Parts of the brain begin to die.

Those who think senility is psychological have "the cart before the horse." Psychological changes often come after changes in the brain," said Dr. Denham Harman of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine.

Because the symptoms of physically-caused senility are much like those of other physical afflictions, Harman "suspects" that some cases of senility are "misdiagnosed."

A series of tests is required to determine whether chronic brain syndrome is really to blame, Peterson explained.

"Those tests generally are not made," he said. "The physician and family look at the individual's behavior, talk to him and make the diagnosis that it is chronic brain syndrome."

"You can't tell that easily." Elderly in nursing homes and other institutions may exhibit symptoms of senility largely because they lack psychological or social stimulation, Peterson said.

Nursing homes here employ such means as reality orientation or reorientation and remotivation to enhance the mental alertness of their residents.

Conversational tidbits and bulletin boards continually remind residents of the day, year, place; sessions are held to remotivate them and create awareness of what is around them.

Research into the causes and cures of senility "is going on all the time," said Harold Norby of Tabitha Home. "But it's not making tremendous advances."

In the treatment area, Norby said, many techniques are being tried. Novocaine is being administered to senility victims in the U.S.S.R.; here, many institutions are employing hyperbaric oxygenation which increases oxygen in the bloodstream and, therefore, the oxygen supply to the brain.

Pharmaceutical companies are experimenting with an anti-senility pill. Researchers are thinning the blood and expanding arteries. Cardiovascular surgery has succeeded in some cases.

"Most scientists have pretty well shot down the more romantic" searches for cures, Norby said. "I personally believe there has to be person process. Even where it is organic, improvement is very possible."

Those who define senility in its strictest — and physical — sense insist it is irreversible.

At the NU Medical College, Harman has devoted his research to isolating the causes of senility. He is Millard professor of medicine, professor of biochemistry and chief of the division of biomedical gerontology in the NU Department of Medicine as well as chief of the Nebraska Geriatric Service at Douglas County Hospital in Omaha.

Although most of his research has been devoted to rats, it may have vast implications for people.

Harman and other researchers have found that dietary fats and Vitamin E can affect the incidence of senility. As different types of dietary fats are in-

Battle Fatigue Shows Up Among Battered Teachers

Los Angeles (AP) — Some teachers at inner-city schools show signs of battle fatigue brought on by the same stresses that prompt the condition in soldiers, says a psychiatrist who has evaluated more than 200 "battered teachers."

Dr. Alfred M. Bloch said the teachers exhibited a variety of symptoms resulting from the stress, including high blood pressure, anxiety, depression, headaches, lowered self-esteem, stomach disturbances and disturbed sleep.

Bloch said he thinks teachers in problem schools should be required to stay only a set time before being transferred and should be offered economic incentives similar to military combat pay.

Bloch, an assistant professor of psychiatry at the University of California, Los Angeles, said the problems teachers face in tough schools are complicated by administrators who tell them they are unsuccessful teachers.

"The combination of continued violence and threats of violence with little or no support from school administrators results in teachers who experience psychological and physiological depletion and ultimately collapse under the stress," Bloch told a meeting of school consultants last week.

Teachers assigned to inner-city schools must be able to function in an ongoing way with the Damoclean reality that the incidents of school violence are usually directed at them," he said. "They are the target. And they are not prepared."

Bloch, speaking last Wednesday to Los Angeles County Mental Health Department school consultants, said he has evaluated more than 200 teachers over the past four years. Most have been referred to him by their union or attorneys and have made claims for Workmen's Compensation.

Bloch cited a number of threats received by teachers, but said he felt less than 1% of all attacks — both physical and psychological — are reported to school officials because "the administration discourages teachers' reporting any of these incidents."

However a school district official said the teachers studied by Bloch represent only a small percentage of the 12,000 teachers working in inner-city schools in Los Angeles. Many teachers feel they have the backing of the administration, he added.

Bloch himself stressed that his research, which he plans to publish, "is not any kind of careful research study... it was just a clinical impression" which disclosed a critical situation.

He said the purpose of presenting his paper to school consultants was to help them to provide guidance to administrators, whose understanding of their teachers' plight could reduce teacher problems.

HINDS... director of NBLC.

Prisoners' Problems Are Universal, Lawyer Says

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

Lennox Hinds is one of those broad shouldered guys who likes to listen to the troubles of others.

The director of the National Conference of Black Lawyers had a chance to do just that at the Nebraska penal complex recently as he conducted a workshop on post-conviction relief problems for inmates at the Lincoln facility.

Hinds is a lawyer in his third year at the helm of the NCBL, a group of more than 1,000 lawyers and 2,500 law students nationwide who are heading affirmative action programs for prisoners. He talked with the Nebraska inmates about problems which he said "are pretty much universal in nature."

The men questioned rules and regulations regarding long hair, beards and mustaches, he said. A recent Supreme Court ruling has held that prisons can't punish men with the facial hair by deducting good time, parole or visitation rights, he added, noting that such practices do exist, nationwide.

Another prevalent problem, both in Nebraska and nationally, is "disparate sentencing," Hinds said. Some prisoners have complained because they went to trial and "received 15 years for a crime that some guy plea-bargained his way out of (pleaded guilty to a lesser charge)," Hinds added.

"These men want to stand before the court as equals," Hinds stressed.

Prisoners should also be guaranteed a minimum wage for jobs they perform, Hinds said. The NCBL considers it crucial that crime is not "an individualistic problem, but, basically, an economic problem," he added.

"It's the old extension of a struggle between the haves and the have-nots."

The NCBL maintains that prisoners have a right to be trained in jobs that are "meaningful in society and guarantee a minimum wage," Hinds said.

Another major question posed by inmates during the two-hour workshop dealt with the whole process of "educational access," he said.

"In some cases, the men felt that they hadn't been given the proper opportunity to further their education."

NCBL aims at providing knowledge in the fields of racism, racial injustice, military justice and litigations for persons involved with the criminal justice system, Hinds explained.

In addition, the group has set up task forces to deal with problems in juvenile justice, criminal rights and international affairs. It maintains a non-governmental organization status with the United Nations, he added.

NCBL has come to the aid of prisoners in Attica and Leavenworth prisons and such notables as Angela Davis, H. Rap Brown and the Black Panthers.

Hinds' visit to the penitentiary was sponsored by Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers.

Here is a well-played hand

South got to six notrump, which required no more than a 3-2 spade division to assure twelve tricks.

But when declarer won the club lead with the queen and played the king and a low spade to the queen, East showed out, discarding a diamond. At this point the outlook turned sour. South could establish a spade trick by conceding a spade after cashing the ace, but this would merely produce trick eleven and leave him one short of the contract.

Declarer thought the matter over carefully and finally came to the right conclusion. He realized that there was still a chance for the slam if West had the king of diamonds and accordingly he decided to play for that possibility.

He cashed three more club tricks, discarding a heart from dummy. Then, after cashing the A-K of hearts, he played the ace and another spade, discarding a heart from his hand.

West had to win the spade with the jack and, with only three cards left — the K-Q-3 of diamonds — returned a low diamond.

South played the queen from dummy and, when it held, he was able to cash dummy's fifth spade and win the last trick with the ace of diamonds. His only loser proved to be a spade.

The deal demonstrates a fairly important principle of dummy play. South came to a point where his cause seemed hopeless, but then found a method of play that gave him a chance if the adverse cards were divided favorably.

He needed some luck to find West with the king of diamonds as well as only two hearts, but it was typical of the kind of luck one often finds associated with good card play.

Send Invitations, Then Let Others Decide

DEAR ABBY I am in a terrible quandary. We are having a formal affair for my son's bar mitzvah. My brother and his wife recently separated and are living apart. I don't know whether they will eventually patch up their differences or go through with the divorce. Should I invite my sister-in-law? We always got along well, and I am very fond of her. Should I send her and my brother separate invitations at their respective addresses? And how about her parents? I like them, too.

IN A QUANDARY

DEAR IN: Send a separate invitation to your sister-in-law and also one to her parents, and let them decide whether or not to accept.

DEAR ABBY I am amazed at your chauvinistic put-down of women who accept invitations from married men. You fail to mention the men who pester married women, often without any encouragement.

And what about the wife who treats her husband like a second-class citizen and refuses sex, but is hurt and martyred when he finds another woman with whom to share love and companionship?

Many unhappy marriages have been saved by the "other woman," who provides a much-needed oasis for the unhappy married man and sends him back to his wife refreshed and renewed.

It's time wives assumed some of the responsibility for the reason their husbands stray. It's also time that we face the horrible truth that wives also stray with cruel, inconsiderate, stupid and short-sighted MALES.

FOR EQUALITY

DEAR FOR EQUALITY If a marriage must be "saved" by the "other woman" (or the "other man") who provides a "much-needed oasis" and sends the lower house "refreshed and renewed," I think all concerned should take a good, hard look at the marriage. Such marriages are for masochists.

DEAR ABBY A waitress signed WANTS TO PLEASE wrote a long list of complaints against customers. The one that irritated me the most was, "Please do not summon the waitress by snapping your fingers, whistling or boistering. 'Hey, Girlie'."

Now I have a question. I eat in restaurants often, and I have a terrible time getting the attention of my waitress.

What is the correct procedure? I have tried the following: Signaling silently to any waitress whose eye I catch, hoping she will fill my water glass or coffee cup, or bring me my check. She gives me a stony look and says, "This isn't my station!"

Then I ask, "Will you please tell the waitress whose station this is that I would like some attention?"

She doesn't say yes, no or go jump in the lake. She just walks away.

I have waited so long for my waitress that I have actually gotten up from my chair and have gone looking for her!

If you have any suggestions for getting a waitress' attention when she is busy making eyes at the bartender or on the kitchen gabbing with the help back there, please let me have it. I have even become so disgusted that I have started for the door. THEN someone runs after me with my check. Perhaps that is the way to get attention.

DISGUSTED IN CHICAGO

DEAR DISGUSTED: Perhaps! (P.S. Meanwhile, easy, man. You sound like a candidate for a coronary.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a chance to win an all-expenses-paid trip with me to Bermuda.

My problem: We would be flying to Florida, which I don't mind, then we'd go to Bermuda by boat through the Bermuda Triangle.

I have heard that planes and ships have been lost and never heard from again after going through the Bermuda Triangle. If this is true, I am afraid to go because I have two children and I don't want to take a chance.

What is your advice?

SCARED UP NORTH
DEAR SCARED: The captain and crew want to live as much as you do, dear, and if there were any possibility of danger, they wouldn't take that route. If your husband wins the trip, go. Bon voyage!

Kansas 'Sunshine' Act 'Working Well' There

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A former Kansas legislator Friday said "dire predictions" made when Kansas enacted legislation similar to Nebraska's proposed Sunshine Initiative "haven't come true" in the 2 years the law has been in effect.

Richard "Pete" Loux of Wichita, former minority leader of the Kansas House, said in Lincoln that Kansas' governmental reform act is working well and that arguments used against the measure have proved to be little more than "fear of the unknown."

The Coalition for Open Government sponsored Loux's visit to Lincoln. Nebraska senators are considering LB987, an alternative proposed to the Sunshine Initiative.

Loux's visit was also designed to counteract impressions left by Missouri Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick concerning election reform there. Kirkpatrick's visit was sponsored primarily by groups opposing the Sunshine Initiative.

'No One Resigned'

Contrary to Kirkpatrick's tale of the Missouri experience, Loux said, "I can think of no one who has resigned or failed to file for re-election due to the new law."

There has been "some grousing" about expenditure limits for candidates, he noted. However, those limits are now in doubt because of a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling striking expenditure limits.

The Kansas law, he said, is close to the Sunshine Initiative but is stronger than LB987.

The biggest objection to the Kansas law came from the lobbyists who were required to disclose all expenditures. Their law does not require lobbyists to report the fees they are paid to support or oppose legislation.

State Candidates Affected

The Kansas law requires candidates to disclose sources of income exceeding $1,000 but not the amounts. It also applies only to candidates at the state level, unlike Nebraska's which extends to some county and city-level officials.

The confidentiality of lawyers' and doctors' patients are protected, since the economic disclosure portion applies only to business clients and not individuals.

He also said no elected officials serve on Kansas' ethics commission, since he said that would not be proper.

Unlike the Nebraska situation, Loux said the Kansas Legislature was not faced with pressure from citizens' groups to enact the reforms. He said the leadership of the House and Senate jointly decided to draft and introduce the legislation.

Loux presently serves on the Kansas Corporation Commission which is similar to the Nebraska Public Service Commission.

In a related matter, the Coalition for Open Government announced plans to gear up its petition drive to put the Sunshine Initiative on the ballot.

Peter Hoagland, coalition coordinator, said, "If the Legislature fails to pass an effective LB987, the coalition will enter the final phase of its drive to gather sufficient signatures to place the Sunshine Initiative on the November 1976 ballot."

Marge Schlitt of Lincoln said, "nothing could help our signature drive more than the failure of the Legislature to pass a strong, effective LB987."

Med Center Doctors Averaged $8,000 In Professional Fees

Omaha (UPI) — A report to University of Nebraska officials says the Nebraska Clinicians Group at the NU Medical Center included 110 doctors last year and they averaged $8,000 net income from professional fees.

NU President D. B. Varner said the average is based on a confidential report the doctors file with the Board of Regents and university administrators.

Varner would say no more about the figures. The average for 110 doctors indicates the total net income was $880,000. In addition, the group spent $306,000 in fee income to operate its collection office.

Some doctors on the faculty do not receive professional fees. The most recent total of full-time faculty members is about 200.

If Over $10,000 Professional fee income is in addition to university salaries.

Patients are billed by the group's professional fees office. A controversy has arisen over the professional fees and a state law that requires NU faculty members to file a report with the state if they earned more than $10,000 a year in professional or consultant fees.

No Medical Center doctor has filed such a report. The law's penalty for noncompliance is withholding of the state paycheck.

Varner said doctors are entitled to earn the fees under their contracts with NU, and this raises a question whether the fees are part of their contract income and, therefore, not extra earnings that must be reported.

Clark, Lewis

He said he is convinced the Clinicians Group is living up to its agreement with the university.

Sens. Robert Clark of Sidney and Richard Lewis of Holbrook introduced a resolution Thursday calling for a legislative study of the professional fees.

James Moylan of Omaha, regents chairman, said he does not recall the range of professional fees on the most recent report. Moylan, an attorney, said he does not believe the doctors' report to the regents exempts them from complying with the state law.

He said regents have not discussed the reporting law "but we're going to."

Might Ask Opinion

Gov. J. J. Exon said he may ask for an opinion from the state attorney general on whether the medical center faculty members must file reports of their professional fees.

Exon said he was not aware that the medical center faculty members believed they were exempt from the law.

Exon said, "If that's their claim that they are exempt then it would be entirely appropriate for first the Board of Regents or the administration of the university who are directly responsible to ask for an opinion from the attorney general. If neither the regents nor the administration of the board of the university system will do this, I will."

Judge Enjoins Omaha's Political Activities Order

Omaha (UPI) — A Douglas County District Judge Friday granted a temporary restraining order prohibiting the City of Omaha from enforcing a home rule charter provision against city employee participation in political activities.

Judge John Clark acted on a request by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local Union 215, and John Mahr, a custodian, who is the union's vice president.

Clark set a hearing date on the suit, which contends the charter provision is unconstitutional, for next Friday.

Weicker Says State Primaries Are Irrelevant

New York (AP) — Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., said that presidential primaries are "irrelevant and unresponsive," and should be abolished.

"If I had my druthers, there'd be a national primary on the first Tuesday in September, the campaign would start on the first Tuesday in October, and we'd have the election on the first Tuesday in November," Weicker said on the WNBC "Sunday" program.

The senator, who is seeking re-election, said that, if nothing else, his proposal would "save everybody's eardrums from a lot of hot air over the next eight months."

Union Chief Resigns For Health Reasons

Washington (UPI) — Paul Jennings, citing ill health, said he will resign, effective June 1, as president of the 250,000-member International Union of Electrical Workers.

Jennings, 58, said his resignation will be submitted to the IUE's executive board. He said he had been advised by his doctor to reduce his responsibilities and activities "for health reasons."

Most Bills To Die Got Day In Court

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

Although critics will point to the more than 150 bills that will die as the Legislature runs out of time this year, there are indications the annual session system adopted by the people in 1970 works.

Critics will bemoan the fact that some bills die without being acted upon.

However, if the supporters of LB1005 really thought it was necessary, they might have introduced it before Feb. 19 of this year.

The fact is that 99% of the bills introduced during the first session of the 84th Legislature last year have had their day in court.

Under the system adopted by the people in 1970, the Legislature meets for a 90-day session in odd-numbered years and a 60-day session in even-numbered years.

The unfinished business from the 90-day session is held over to the 60-day session. After the 60-day session, everything left dies and half of the state senators are up for re-election.

Supporters of the original plan said that most issues would be addressed in the 90-day session. The logjam of bills awaiting first-round debate contains only seven bills which were introduced during the 90-day session last year.

The remaining 606 bills introduced last year were either enacted into law, killed, vetoed, tabled by the Legislature or are on their way to final passage.

Most of the bills which will die without legislative floor action were introduced this year in a 60-day session not designed to consider new issues.

The latest bills, introduced by the Appropriations Committee, came in on March 15, with only two weeks to go in the session.

Of the 150 bills caught in the logjam, 69 were introduced on the last day allowed under the rules for bill introduction or the rules were suspended and they went in the hopper after the deadline.

They Gave A Party, But Only Dyas Came

Omaha (UPI) — Hess Dyas showed up to speak to a downtown Omaha Kiwanis luncheon Friday. He thought Ed Zorinsky would be there too.

Zorinsky wasn't, but Dyas said it's "too early to tell" whether the Omaha mayor was avoiding him in their 1976 Democratic U.S. Senate primary race.

Advance releases sent to the news media by both the Kiwanis Club and the Dyas campaign organization indicated Zorinsky would be there.

However, a Zorinsky spokesman said the mayor had received an invitation, but declined in favor of an outstate Nebraska campaign trip.

John Miller the Kiwanis member who set up the program, said he was notified Monday by a Zorinsky campaign official, Ann Boyle, that the mayor wouldn't attend.

Dyas, former state party chairman from Lincoln, said he was "surprised."

"I'm not willing to say he's avoiding me," Dyas said. "It's too early. But we'll find out as we go through the next weeks of the campaign."

"There are potential times for us to appear together," Dyas said. "and then we'll be able to tell whether he's actually avoiding me or not."

Dyas wrote Zorinsky Thursday again asking him for a series of five joint appearances, but Zorinsky declined.

"I guess I feel it's rather interesting," Dyas told UPI in an interview following the Kiwanis meeting. "that once again we try to clarify the situation, and the mayor responds with a sarcastic letter."

"And," Dyas said, "he did not show up at the Kiwanis Club today."

In his letter to Dyas, Zorinsky said, in part, "I am sorry to learn the difficulty you are having with your campaign, and I sympathize with your problem."

Zorinsky said, "Frankly, I'm more interested in what the people have to say" than what Dyas has to say.

Ironically, Miller said Zorinsky was now scheduled to appear before the Kiwanis on April 16. That was a date reserved for Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Neb., a Republican U.S. Senate candidate, but Miller said McCollister canceled.

Miller said he was "positive" Dyas' appearance didn't have anything to do with Zorinsky's absence Friday.

Road Dept. Gets Erma's Pictures

Grand Island (UPI) — Initial engineer's drawings for the controversial Interstate 80 bicentennial sculpture "Erma's Desire" have been submitted to the State Highway Department for approval.

The sculpture will be placed in a rest area west of Grand Island. Completion is scheduled before July.

The sculptor, John Ramondi of Maine, was scheduled to arrive in Grand Island Friday night. The local committee working on the project planned to meet with him Tuesday night.

Controversy arose last year when drawings of the abstract sculpture were made public

Tax Official Predicts Increase If Unicam Keeps Present Pace

Kearney (AP) — State Tax Commissioner William Peters says that if lawmakers continue at their present pace, the state's income and sales taxes will have to go up.

Speaking to a meeting of the Central Nebraska County Officials Association, Peters said that with Gov. J. James Exon's proposed budget, the issue was how much taxes could be reduced.

But with recent action in the Unicameral, the issue now is how much taxes are going to increase, said Peters.

If all bills now on general file are passed without considering amendment, Peters said that both the state income and sales taxes will have to be increased.

He predicted a jump from 2 1/4% to 3% in the sales tax, and an increase of two or three percentage points in the income tax, raising it to 15 or 16% of the federal liability.

Peters also predicted that Exon will again make liberal use of veto powers, and said he hopes the governor's actions are sustained by the Legislature.

The association's new officers were elected during Thursday's meeting.

They include: Conrad Boehler, Harlan County commissioner, president, succeeding Gerald Hruza; Dean Cannon, past chairman of the Buffalo County Board, vice president; and Jean Fisher, Hall County Register of Deeds, secretary-treasurer.

City Personnel Director Larry Wewel and Ruth F. Jackson, a Human Relations Department field representative, said they are uncertain now whether to withdraw.

Weicker Says State Primaries Are Irrelevant

New York (AP) — Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., said that presidential primaries are "irrelevant and unresponsive," and should be abolished.

"If I had my druthers, there'd be a national primary on the first Tuesday in September, the campaign would start on the first Tuesday in October, and we'd have the election on the first Tuesday in November," Weicker said on the WNBC "Sunday" program.

The senator, who is seeking reelection, said that, if nothing else, his proposal would "save everybody's eardrums from a lot of hot air over the next eight months."

Union Chief Resigns For Health Reasons

Washington (UPI) — Paul Jennings, citing ill health, said he will resign, effective June 1, as president of the 250,000-member International Union of Electrical Workers.

Jennings, 58, said his resignation will be submitted to the IUE's executive board. He said he had been advised by his doctor to reduce his responsibilities and activities "for health reasons."

Most Bills To Die Got Day In Court

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

Although critics will point to the more than 150 bills that will die as the Legislature runs out of time this year, there are indications the annual session system adopted by the people in 1970 works.

Critics will bemoan the fact that some bills die without being acted upon.

However, if the supporters of LB1005 really thought it was necessary, they might have introduced it before Feb. 19 of this year.

The fact is that 99% of the bills introduced during the first session of the 84th Legislature last year have had their day in court.

Under the system adopted by the people in 1970, the Legislature meets for a 90-day session in odd-numbered years and a 60-day session in even-numbered years.

The unfinished business from the 90-day session is held over to the 60-day session. After the 60-day session, everything left dies and half of the state senators are up for re-election.

Supporters of the original plan said that most issues would be addressed in the 90-day session. The logjam of bills awaiting first-round debate contains only seven bills which were introduced during the 90-day session last year.

The remaining 606 bills introduced last year were either enacted into law, killed, vetoed, tabled by the Legislature or are on their way to final passage.

Most of the bills which will die without legislative floor action were introduced this year in a 60-day session not designed to consider new issues.

The latest bills, introduced by the Appropriations Committee, came in on March 15, with only two weeks to go in the session.

Of the 150 bills caught in the logjam, 69 were introduced on the last day allowed under the rules for bill introduction or the rules were suspended and they went in the hopper after the deadline.

They Gave A Party, But Only Dyas Came

Omaha (UPI) — Hess Dyas showed up to speak to a downtown Omaha Kiwanis luncheon Friday. He thought Ed Zorinsky would be there too.

Zorinsky wasn't, but Dyas said it's "too early to tell" whether the Omaha mayor was avoiding him in their 1976 Democratic U.S. Senate primary race.

Advance releases sent to the news media by both the Kiwanis Club and the Dyas campaign organization indicated Zorinsky would be there.

However, a Zorinsky spokesman said the mayor had received an invitation, but declined in favor of an outstate Nebraska campaign trip.

John Miller, the Kiwanis member who set up the program, said he was notified Monday by a Zorinsky campaign official, Ann Boyle, that the mayor wouldn't attend.

Dyas, former state party chairman from Lincoln, said he was "surprised."

"I'm not willing to say he's avoiding me," Dyas said. "It's too early. But we'll find out as we go through the next weeks of the campaign."

"There are potential times for us to appear together," Dyas said, "and then we'll be able to tell whether he's actually avoiding me or not."

Dyas wrote Zorinsky Thursday again asking him for a series of five joint appearances, but Zorinsky declined.

"I guess I feel it's rather interesting," Dyas told UPI in an interview following the Kiwanis meeting, "that once again we try to clarify the situation, and the mayor responds with a sarcastic letter."

"And," Dyas said, "he did not show up at the Kiwanis Club today."

In his letter to Dyas, Zorinsky said, in part, "I am sorry to learn the difficulty you are having with your campaign, and I sympathize with your problem."

Zorinsky said, "Frankly, I'm more interested in what the people have to say" than what Dyas has to say.

Ironically, Miller said Zorinsky was now scheduled to appear before the Kiwanis on April 16. That was a date reserved for Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Neb., a Republican U.S. Senate candidate, but Miller said McCollister canceled.

Miller said he was "positive" Dyas' appearance didn't have anything to do with Zorinsky's absence Friday.

Road Dept. Gets Erma's Pictures

Grand Island (UPI) — Initial engineer's drawings for the controversial Interstate 80 bicentennial sculpture "Erma's Desire" have been submitted to the State Highway Department for approval.

The sculpture will be placed in a rest area west of Grand Island. Completion is scheduled before July.

The sculptor, John Raimondi of Maine, was scheduled to arrive in Grand Island Friday night. The local committee working on the project planned to meet with him Tuesday night.

Controversy arose last year when drawings of the abstract sculpture were made public.

Tax Official Predicts Increase If Unicam Keeps Present Pace

Kearney (AP) — State Tax Commissioner William Peters says that if lawmakers continue at their present pace, the state's income and sales taxes will have to go up.

Speaking to a meeting of the Central Nebraska County Officials Association, Peters said that with Gov. J. James Exon's proposed budget, the issue was how much taxes could be reduced.

But with recent action in the Unicameral, the issue now is how much taxes are going to increase, said Peters.

If all bills now on general file are passed without considering amendment, Peters said that both the state income and sales taxes will have to be increased.

He predicted a jump from 2½% to 3% in the sales tax, and an increase of two or three percentage points in the income tax, raising it to 15 or 16% of the federal liability.

Peters also predicted that Exon will again make liberal use

Amended LB434

Western Tech Appropriation Unconstitutional

Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas has advised Sen. William Nichol of Scottsbluff a proposed amendment to a bill which would appropriate $225,000 for repair of Western Technical Community College facilities appears unconstitutional.

The opinion, requested by Nichol and written by Assistant Atty. Gen. Harold Mosher, said the amendment would be special legislation prohibited by the Constitution. It would not operate "uniformly and alike upon each of the six technical community college areas," the opinion said.

Man Accused Of Pointing Gun At Passing Auto

A Lincoln man was arrested early Friday morning after he allegedly pointed a gun at a motorist attempting to pass his car on O St.

Police said William Bruce, 5001 Belhaven Drive, was issued a citation in the incident after Jack Skinner, a Colorado Springs, Colo. resident, reported the incident to police. Skinner said he was at 40th and O Sts. when it happened.

Lewis Will Fight Vetoes In Special Ed Aid Bill

Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue said Friday he will attempt Monday or Tuesday to override the line item vetoes by Gov. J. James Exon in a bill, LB752, which includes a deficiency appropriation of more than $500,000 for special education programs.

Thursday, the Legislature refused to call the measure back from the governor's office, although they agreed to recall two other spending bills.

A little later, Exon's line item veto message was delivered to the lawmakers.

Lewis Thursday fought return of the spending bills, arguing they were passed "on the basis of what we thought were legitimate needs of the state." He is chairman of the Educational Committee which approved LB752.

Campus Disparity Seen

Omaha (AP) — A candidate for the University of Nebraska Board of Regents says he thinks the university's Omaha campus suffers second-rate status to the campus in Lincoln.

"It's second-rate in terms of money spent on the two campuses," Dr. William C. Minier said Friday.

Minier, an Omaha family practitioner in his first political race, said, "It is obvious certain costs will be higher for the Lincoln campus, because of the administration carried there. But there is a disparity."

The Lincoln campus has requested appropriation of $54 million for the 1976-77 fiscal year, while only $13 million has been requested for the Omaha campus.

Minier is a 1967 graduate of the Lincoln campus.

BN Engineer Opposes Warner

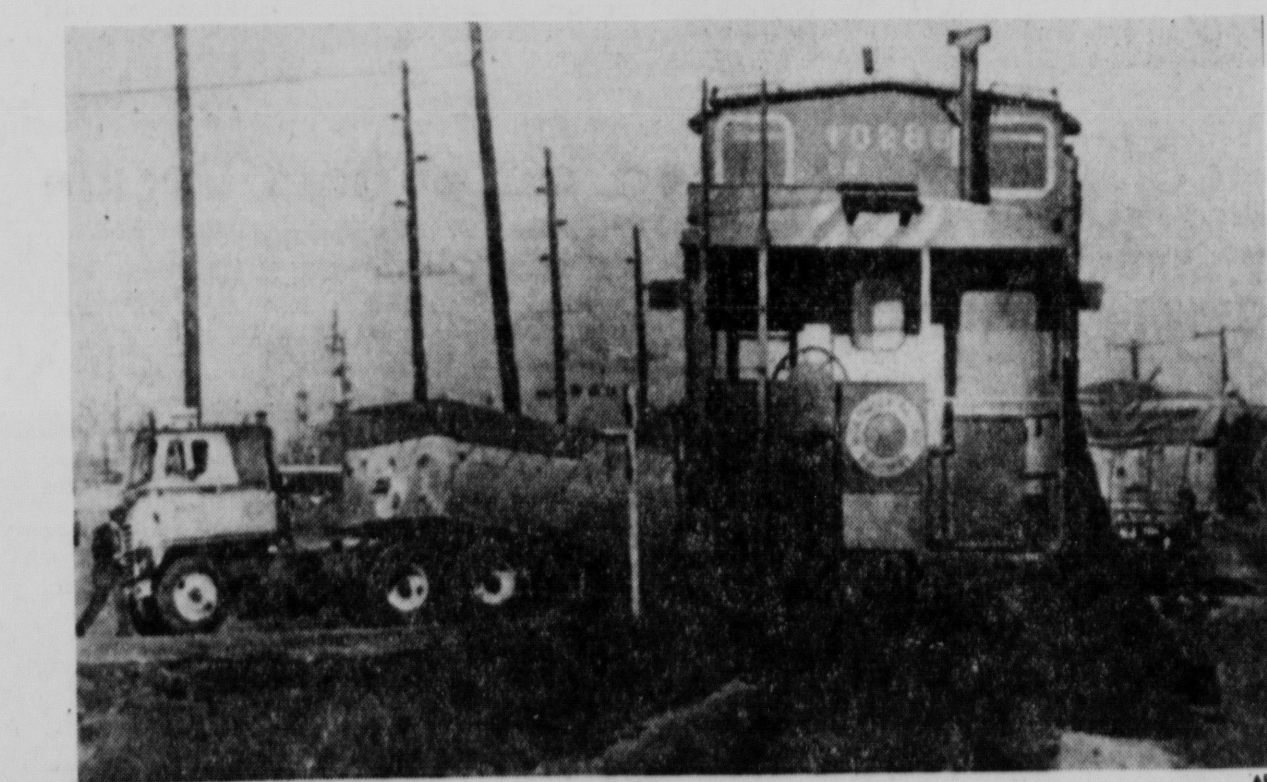

Richard Hedrick, a Waverly employee of Burlington Northern, will appear on the ballot for the legislative seat held by Sen. Jerry Warner.

Hedrick said Friday an error by the secretary of state in the handling of his indigent affidavit to enter the race without paying a filing fee resulted in his name being taken off the ballot.

"They thought I withdrew," Hedrick said.

Hedrick said he hopes to represent the working man in the Legislature. He is a railroad engineer.

Asked what he thought of Warner, Hedrick said, "I'm not really sure what he does."

BN Freight Splits Trucker's Rig

A 32-car Burlington Northern freight train chopped a Colorado truck driver's semi rig in half Friday at the edge of Scottsbluff. Engineer Americo J. Lorenzini, 57, of Alliance, said the train was going about 50 miles per hour. Trucker Russell H. Moritz, 26, of Brush, Colo., was not injured, but BN fireman John Herhalt, 39, of Sterling, Colo., had a knee injury. The 40-foot trailer filled with feed pellets was cut in half. Moritz said he didn't see the train.

Extra Room Offered To Inmates

By The Associated Press
The Lincoln Regional Center has offered to take more prisoners from the crowded Penal Complex, but wants better medical-psychiatric care for the prisoners when they return to the complex.
Regional Center officials also want the Corrections Department to support increased funding for staff to care for extra prisoners housed at the center.
Dr. Klaus Hartmann, head of the center, offered to convert an unused 25-bed ward into a facility for prisoners. Presently, 11 beds are provided for prisoners at the center and penal officials contend that is not enough.
Hartmann has issued a "fact sheet" outlining allegations that the Penal Complex sometimes ignores psychiatric recommendations when prisoners are transferred back to the correctional facility.

Dr. Leonard Woytaszek of the center, a psychiatrist, has charged that penal complex officials sometimes arbitrarily decrease medication when the prisoners are returned.
According to a story in the Lincoln Journal Friday, a Penal Complex staffer who asked to remain anonymous said sometimes such returned prisoners are placed in solitary confinement.
Joseph Vitek, head of the State Corrections Department, said the allegations "just aren't true." Vitek said in the past there were legal questions regarding liability in forcing prisoner-patients who are psychotic to take medication, but that has been cleared up now.
Vitek also said in the past mentally-troubled inmates with suicidal or homicidal tendencies were placed in solitary confinement, but that practice ended about a year ago when the prison's own 35-bed psychiatric unit was established.

Hartmann's proposal regarding increased funding from the Department of Institutions to pay regional center staffers comparable amounts to prison guard pay because of increased security tensions brought a cautious reply from Vitek.
Vitek said he was interested in the center expansion proposal, but would want to know the qualifications and classifications of employees who would care for the prisoners transferred to the center before joining in the request for higher pay.
According to reports, such center staffers receive about $100 a month less than prison guards.

U.S. Strategic Deterrent 'Adequate'

Omaha (UPI) — Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld assured members of the Strategic Air Command Friday the U.S. strategic deterrent is adequate, despite growing Russian capabilities.
Rumsfeld came to Omaha to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the Strategic Air Command, the part of the Air Force that controls the bomber and the missile forces that would be used in a nuclear war.

Part of Rumsfeld's trip will include a practice bombing run on a B52 down the Missouri River and a visit to a Minuteman nuclear missile silo at Whiteman Air Force Base near Kansas City.
"My judgment is that we have an acceptable, healthy strategic deterrent today," Rumsfeld told the reporters at Offutt Air Force Base.

Rumsfeld did not disagree with statistics that showed increasing Soviet capabilities in a number of areas. "We have moved from a position of superiority to a position of rough equivalent," Rumsfeld said.
Americans can no longer believe, he added, "that you can extract dollars from the federal budget with no deterioration to our national security."
Two presidential candidates who will be running in the May 11 Nebraska primary, Republican Ronald Reagan and Democrat Sen. Henry M. Jackson, both have said that Soviet power has pulled past the United States.
"It would be misleading to induce people to think that we do not have an adequate strategic deterrent," he said. "We do."
On another aspect of the strategic arms race, that of the ability to order nuclear strikes, Rumsfeld refused to talk.
"A policy we have had, and have today, is not to discuss our policies on nuclear weapons," he said. "We are all well aware of the fact that the President has control on nuclear weapons."
Rumsfeld resisted repeated attempts and would not confirm or deny the testimony of Vice Adm. Gerald Miller, who said the commander of the North American Air Defense Command could commit defensive airplanes and missiles without specific presidential approval.

Judge Orders Omahan Returned To Probation At Regional Center

Omaha (AP) — District Court Judge Samuel Caniglia has ordered Kenneth Lee Sird returned to the Lincoln Regional Center, where he had been confined after admitting he started a fire that destroyed the Lorenz Chemical Co. two years ago.
Judge Caniglia made the ruling Thursday after hearing evidence that Sird committed another felony last month. The judge said he wanted an order drawn saying Sird is not to leave the regional center "without written consent of this court."
5-Year Probation
Caniglia imposed a five-year probation, the maximum allowable under state law, and made Sird's confinement in the regional center a condition of that probation.

Sird, 20, was arrested Feb. 29 near the Jones Oil Co. in Omaha. Police said he was carrying a money box from a coin machine and a screwdriver, and they learned moments later the oil station had been burglarized and a vending machine rifled.
Sird was charged with violating the sentence of probation he received in January 1974. He pleaded guilty to the violation.
At the time of the Lorenz fire, Sird was on probation for attempted burglary. The Eastern Nebraska Community Office of Retardation (ENCOR) had agreed to accept him in one of its workshops, but never got the chance.

$500,000 Blaze
Less than a week after his court appearance, Sird broke into the Lorenz plant to rifle the coin box of a candy machine. While inside he tossed a lighted cigar into a trash can. The resulting blaze destroyed the plant, causing an estimated $500,000 damage.
After psychiatric examination, Sird returned to court and his probation was extended for five years by Caniglia, with the stipulation that he undergo treatment in the regional center for an indeterminate period. He was released from the Regional Center in September.

McCollister: Spend More For Defense

Bellevue (UPI) — Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Neb., Friday called for more balanced spending between national defense and human resource programs.
"Not only does the federal government spend more for human resource programs than for national defense," McCollister said, "but this year for the first time it spends twice as much."
Speaking to a luncheon in Bellevue, the home of the Strategic Air Command, McCollister said "scrampling on national defense has proved a policy penny wise and pound foolish."
McCollister, a 1976 Republican Senate primary candidate, said in 1970, the federal government spent $79 billion for defense and $73 billion for human resources.
In 1971, McCollister said human resource spending "surged ahead," increasing to $89 billion, while defense was cut to $76 billion. At present, human resource spending totals $199 billion, McCollister said, while defense stands at $92.8 billion.
McCollister attributed the recent Soviet "adventurism" in foreign affairs to Russia's "calculation that the United States has neither the means nor the determination to resist."
The Omaha lawmaker said he was "encouraged" at the Ford administration's "stiffened posture" reflected earlier this week when the United States canceled several U.S.-Soviet meetings and joint ventures.

Two Charged In Omaha Killing

Omaha (AP) — Deputy Douglas County Atty. Sam Cooper has filed warrants charging two men with first degree murder in the shooting death in Omaha last December of Roscoe H. Jackson, 26.
They are Roy L. Honorable, about 40, in custody in Des Moines on robbery charges, and Daniel Reese, 27, of Omaha, who is not in custody.
Police have accused Honorable, a parolee from the Nebraska Penal Complex, of firing a shotgun blast that killed

Jackson in a North Omaha alley Dec. 26.
Lt. James Perry of the homicide unit said police believe Honorable headed a heroin ring and that Jackson's death resulted from a feud involving drugs and money.
Honorable has lived in Omaha and Lincoln in recent years. Records show he gave a home address in Chicago when he was arrested and charged with heroin possession in Omaha in November 1973.

District Court records show Honorable received a one-to-five-year term in the Nebraska Penal Complex after he was convicted of heroin possession in March 1974, and was paroled to a Lincoln work release residence in September 1975.
Honorable and Sylvester Williams Jr., 22, of Omaha were arrested in Des Moines following a Jan. 24 robbery of a grocery store and are awaiting trial there.
Cooper said Williams is one of three persons he will charge with being accessories to the murder of Jackson after the fact. The others are Nolan L. Berry, 27, and Robert J. Cannon, 18, both of Omaha, who were in jail in Omaha.

Private Rest Home Rates Could Dip This Summer

Omaha (AP) — A spokesman for the Nebraska Health Care Assn. says nursing home rates for private patients may stabilize or decrease after July 1, depending on how a payment formula for welfare patients works out.
Gene Thompson, association director, said Thursday private patients, now partly subsidize many welfare patients.
Some Nebraska nursing homes have stopped accepting welfare patients because they say government Medicaid payments do not cover the cost of care. A new payment method is to start July 1.
Thompson said the association, made up of nursing homes, did a study nine months ago showing the average daily cost for a person needing an intermediate level of care was $14.61. That was before a 20-cent-a-hour increase in the minimum wage, which affects nursing homes.
The state allows maximum payments of between $12.10 and $13.97 a day for intermediate care.

Thompson said about 6,000 of the 7,000 Medicaid nursing home patients require intermediate care.
The association study also showed the average daily cost for a person requiring skilled care was $17.51. Medicaid's maximum for this category, affecting about 1,000 patients, is about $17.
Results of a state-sponsored audit of nursing homes announced this week indicated the present maximums are sufficient to meet average expenses.
Vets Hospital Tabs Bastani
The Veterans Administration Hospital in Lincoln has announced the appointment of Dr. Jehangir B. Bastani as chief of psychiatry. He has been acting chief for the past year.
Dr. Bastani received his medical education and training in psychiatry in India before immigrating to the United States in 1972.
He completed a three-year residency in psychiatry at the University of Nebraska College of Medicine in Omaha, and currently is an assistant professor in clinical psychiatry at Creighton Medical School.

Officer Says National Guard Needs Recruits

The Nebraska Army National Guard's recruiting campaign is having good success but more signups are needed, according to Maj. William E. Whitney, recruiting and retention officer.
Since the start of the "Operation Cornhuskers Minuteman '76" recruiting drive on Feb. 1, there have been 275 enlistments across the state and extensions of nearly 150 enlistments.
This number is not a net gain because during the same period 200 members have left the guard after completion of service.
The guard is still about 400 persons short with most of the shortages in 10 units. Units not filled by the end of the recruiting campaign could face relocation or deactivation later this year, Whitney said.

Do you gain any real comfort from that old cliché about dark clouds having silver linings? Who can peel a cloud to find its happy lining?
But frustration has been a blessing to many men. It has driven self-centered souls to seek a new fulcrum for life. It has brought men to God . . . acknowledging human failure . . . seeking divine strength.
And as they have found in the Church comfort and courage they have learned anew the spiritual meaning of defeat and victory.
The One that this world crucified is King of kings. Beyond a cross and a crown of thorns our greatest aspirations await us.

Jackson in a North Omaha alley Dec. 26.
Lt. James Perry of the homicide unit said police believe Honorable headed a heroin ring and that Jackson's death resulted from a feud involving drugs and money.
Honorable has lived in Omaha and Lincoln in recent years. Records show he gave a home address in Chicago when he was arrested and charged with heroin possession in Omaha in November 1973.

District Court records show Honorable received a one- to five-year term in the Nebraska Penal Complex after he was convicted of heroin possession in March 1974, and was paroled to a Lincoln work release residence in September 1975.
Honorable and Sylvester Williams Jr., 22, of Omaha were arrested in Des Moines following a Jan. 24 robbery of a grocery store and are awaiting trial there.
Cooper said Williams is one of three persons he will charge with being accessories to the murder of Jackson after the fact. The others are Nolan L. Berry, 27, and Robert J. Cannon, 18, both of Omaha, who were in jail in Omaha.

Private Rest Home Rates Could Dip This Summer

Omaha (AP) — A spokesman for the Nebraska Health Care Assn. says nursing home rates for private patients may stabilize or decrease after July 1, depending on how a payment formula for welfare patients works out.
Gene Thompson, association director, said Thursday private patients, now partly subsidize many welfare patients.
Some Nebraska nursing homes have stopped accepting welfare patients because they say government Medicaid payments do not cover the cost of care. A new payment method is to start July 1.
Thompson said the association, made up of nursing homes, did a study nine months ago showing the average daily cost for a person needing an intermediate level of care was $14.61. That was before a 20-cents-an-hour increase in the minimum wage, which affects nursing homes.
The state allows maximum payments of between $12.10 and $13.97 a day for intermediate care.

Thompson said about 6,000 of the 7,000 Medicaid nursing home patients require intermediate care.
The association study also showed the average daily cost for a person requiring skilled care was $17.51. Medicaid's maximum for this category, affecting about 1,000 patients, is about $17.
Results of a state-sponsored audit of nursing homes announced this week indicated the present maximums are sufficient to meet average expenses.

Iowa Farmer Names Church In His Will

De Witt, Iowa (UPI) — John R. Reed, a De Witt farmer who died in February, named several Catholic orders and a diocese as beneficiaries of his $140,000 estate.

Vets Hospital Tabs Bastani

The Veterans Administration Hospital in Lincoln has announced the appointment of Dr. Jehangir B. Bastani as chief of psychiatry. He has been acting chief for the past year.
Dr. Bastani received his medical education and training in psychiatry in India before immigrating to the United States in 1972.
He completed a three-year residency in psychiatry at the University of Nebraska College of Medicine in Omaha, and currently is an assistant professor in clinical psychiatry at Creighton Medical School.

Officer Says National Guard Needs Recruits

The Nebraska Army National Guard's recruiting campaign is having good success but more signups are needed, according to Maj. William E. Whitney, recruiting and retention officer.
Since the start of the "Operation Cornhuskers Minuteman-76" recruiting drive on Feb. 1, there have been 275 enlistments across the state and extensions of nearly 150 enlistments.
This number is not a net gain because during the same period 200 members have left the guard after completion of service.
The guard is still about 400 persons short with most of the shortages in 10 units. Units not filled by the end of the recruiting campaign could face relocation or deactivation later this year, Whitney said.

Do you gain any real comfort from that old cliché about dark clouds having silver linings? Who can peel a cloud to find its happy lining?
But frustration has been a blessing to many men. It has driven self-centered souls to seek a new fulcrum for life. It has brought men to God . . . acknowledging human failure . . . seeking divine strength.
And as they have found in the Church comfort and courage they have learned anew the spiritual meaning of defeat and victory.

Bob The Robin's Been Bobbin' For 10 Years

By DEAN TERRILL
 Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Beatrice — Here is one robin which doesn't come bob-bob-bobbin' along just because it's spring.

This Bob has already been here. For 10 years yet, just chirp-chirp-chirpin' in the Clifford Guenther living room.

Barely feathered when he fell from a nest into their yard, the bird so thrived on domesticity that he's now a socially secure senior citizen. With no protection but an ordinary cage, he even survived mugster felines Bonnie and Clyde with which he shared the house.

"Old Clyde is dead now, but he was trained just like Bonnie to ignore the robin," said Mrs. Guenther. "And she hardly even looks at the bird any more."

Animal lovers that they are, the Guenthers had no thought of keeping the robin beyond his attainment of flying status. But given a chance at freedom, he spent a full day twirling his protests and practically begged for a return to his cage.

"Bob was only a year or so old when a neighbor's cat got into the house and broke one of the bird's wings trying to pull him from his cage," reflected the couple, now retirees. "He could never fly again, so we couldn't possibly return him to the wild. He became just another pet."

Raised on bread, milk and small pieces of hamburger, the bird now has a more varied diet which even includes dry cat food. His insistence on such other tidbits as bananas, lettuce and oatmeal earned him a reputation as "one persnickety bird."

Though he never warbles in conventional robin style, Bob has his own way of voicing contentment. He also can scold and seems to enjoy playing pranks.

"We have one of those unusual sounding phones which he can imitate perfectly," said Mrs. Guenther. "A number of times we've answered the phone only to find that the ring came from Bob."

BOB . . . with Mrs. Guenther, is a pet.

Loser Trying To Overturn Student Elections

By DICK HOLMAN
 Star Staff Writer

Improper filing of financial forms could be the key to overturning University of Nebraska-Lincoln student government elections, a defeated presidential candidate said Friday.

Paul R. Morrison of St. Paul, currently Associated Students of the University of Nebraska second vice president, said he's filing a complaint with the ASUN Electoral Commission.

"I assume I might file it with student court" if the commission won't accept the complaint, he said. Since commissioners won't meet until the week of March 29, Morrison said he hopes they'll resolve the issue before April 7,

"when we're supposed to change administrations."

The ASUN executive posts are mainly at issue, Morrison said if winners are nullified before the inaugural date, "I assume the second-place candidates will take office."

That would vault Scott R. Cook of Sidney into the UNL student body presidency and the NU Board of Regents seat. Rachel C. Young of Valentine would become first vice president and John E. Welch of Curtis, second vice president.

Election-day winners of those offices, respectively, are William J. Mueller, Ogallala, Paula Jean Haeder, Omaha, and Dennis Martin, Elgin.

Should the election be nullified after those winners take office, "we'll have to have a special election," probably including races for ASUN Senate seats, Morrison said.

Although the ASUN presidential balloting also filled a state office on the Board of Regents, Morrison said Secretary of State Allen Beermann "said there's nothing he can do officially to step in," and indicated some complaints aren't justifiable to throw out election returns.

But Morrison said there's enough evidence, "in my mind, to nullify all those candidates in the Greek slate." His reference was to endorsements of candidates affiliated with Greek-letter fraternities and sororities, including Mueller, Miss Haeder and Martin.

Morrison said, "There was never a financial form filed by the Greek slate" or by those persons who distributed information on campus about the slate which "can be identified as campaign material."

Also, he said, some graduate students voted illegally for professional students (such as law and dentistry). And another graduate student "said she got a Teachers College (undergraduate) ballot," Morrison said.

Outgoing ASUN President Jim Say of Norfolk also noted "several complaints" about ballot availability. "When people did vote, they were allowed to vote for only particular sets of people instead of getting all the ballots for a particular (academic) college status."

Say said he also received complaints of "improper filing of financial statements, especially with regard to the Greek slate."

Police Seek Holdrege Jail Runaways

Holdrege (AP) — Authorities were looking Friday for two young men who escaped from the Holdrege city jail.

Capt. Merle Taylor said he discovered the two were missing when he went to clean some cells shortly after 10 a.m.

The two were identified as Jerry Anderson, 16, of Norton, Kan., held pending trial on two counts of burglary, and Gary Talbert, 17, of Holdrege, charged with two counts of breaking and entering.

Both were held in lieu of $5,000 bond.

Police said it was not known how the two got out of the cell and onto a fire escape, where they escaped to the street.

A woman reported two young men ran past her on a street. Police said a brown station wagon was stolen in Holdrege at about the same time.

Man Sought In Shooting Surrenders

Omaha (AP) — A second man charged in the wounding of an Omaha drug store owner has turned himself in at police headquarters.

He is McKinley Godbold, 25, of Omaha, charged in a warrant with the use of a firearm in committing a felony, robbery and shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim.

A Bellevue man earlier this week was ordered to stand trial in connection with the wounding of druggist Frank Bogard.

Bogard was shot in the neck at his drug store Friday night. Relatives have said he may be paralyzed from the chest down.

June Days Beat Spring To Lincoln

Summer-like weather, rather than the day-before Spring, covered Nebraska Friday, soaring up to a record 85 degrees at Omaha.

In Lincoln the day's high was 80, just two degrees below the record high for March 19, set in 1921 Omaha broke the old record high for the date of 84, also set 55 years ago.

High winds, causing blowing dust, accompanied the warm temperatures. Gusts up to 54 miles per hour were registered at Scottsbluff, while Lincoln had gusts as high as 45 m.p.h. and Omaha up to 46 m.p.h.

During the high winds, a Sabetha, Kan., man escaped injury shortly after noon Friday when his light aircraft was tipped while taxiing near the General Aviation facilities at Lincoln Municipal Airport.

Firemen said Waymer Serahm of Sabetha was the pilot of the plane, a Cessna 172 Skyhawk owned by Sabetha Flying Corp. The plane received damage to the propeller, cowling and right wing, officials said.

Ogallala Man Killed At Car, Truck Plaza

Ogallala (AP) — Keith County Atty. Pat Hays said late Friday he is considering filing charges of first degree murder against one of three persons held in connection with the shooting death of an Ogallala service station attendant.

The victim, Gary W. Olson, 28, of Ogallala was shot to death early Friday at a large auto and truck plaza near the Ogallala interchange on Interstate 80.

Hays said it is possible he will charge a second person with either aiding or abetting or as an accessory after the fact. But Hays did not specify which charges would be filed against which person.

Keith County authorities jailed two men and one woman in connection with the incident.

They were tentatively identified as David Amos Travis, Charles A. Darden, 42, and Janita R. Jones. No other information was given. Authorities said they were in a car with California license plates. They were taken into custody at the scene.

Investigators are continuing to question witnesses and the three persons. Hays said the three may be using aliases, so an investigation into their identities continues.

Hays said Olson was shot once in the chest with a .32 caliber handgun. Two other shots struck a building, Hays said.

Witnesses reported hearing three shots as Olson was getting a credit card signature from one of the men.

Hays described the weapon used in the shooting as a "Saturday night special on which the serial number had been filed off." The gun was found in the woman's purse, police reported.

Two children, a boy and a girl believed to have been pas- sengers in the car with the three, were taken into custody by the Keith County welfare office.

Funeral services for Olson have been scheduled for Monday morning at 10 at the Bracken mortuary in Ogallala. He is survived by his widow, Juanita, and his parents.

Omaha Children Treated After Rescue From Fire

Omaha (UPI) — Two children were treated for smoke inhalation Friday after being rescued from a second floor bedroom by firemen.

Authorities said the children, Kindel A. Hatridge, 10, and Lisa Smith, 12, had been living with Mrs. Phyllis O'Donnell at her Omaha home for about a year.

A Fire Department spokesman estimated damages to the home at $1,500 and said the fire started in an overstuffed chair on the first floor.

The spokesman said the house was "loaded with smoke and it was difficult to get in or see" when firemen arrived.

Fireman Leo Selk climbed a ladder to the second floor and entered. He handed one girl to another fireman and then carried the other girl down the ladder.

Authorities said the girls had been placed in the O'Donnell home by the Douglas County Welfare Department.

Authorities said Mrs. O'Donnell, also in the home at the time, was escorted from the house and escaped injury.

Bob The Robin's Been Bobbin' For 10 Years

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Beatrice — Here is one robin which doesn't come bob-bobbin' along just because it's spring.

This Bob has already been here. For 10 years yet, just chirp-chirp-chirp in the Clifford Guenther living room.

Barely feathered when he fell from a nest into their yard, the bird so thrived on domesticity that he's now a socially secure senior citizen. With no protection but an ordinary cage, he even survived mugster felines Bonnie and Clyde with which he shared the house.

"Old Clyde is dead now, but he was trained just like Bonnie to ignore the robin," said Mrs. Guenther. "And she hardly even looks at the bird any more."

Animal lovers that they are, the Guenthers had no thought of keeping the robin beyond his attainment of flying status. But given a chance at freedom, he spent a full day twirling his protests and practically begged for a return to his cage.

Then came near-tragedy which left the Guenthers with no choice.

"Bob was only a year or so old when a neighbor's cat got into the house and broke one of the bird's wings trying to pull him from his cage," reflected the couple, now retirees. "He could never fly again, so we couldn't possibly return him to the wild. He became just another pet."

Raised on bread, milk and small pieces of hamburger, the bird now has a more varied diet which even includes dry cat food. His insistence on such other tidbits as bananas, lettuce and oatmeal earned him a reputation as "one persnickety bird."

Though he never warbles in conventional robin style, Bob has his own way of voicing contentment. He also can scold and seems to enjoy playing pranks.

"We have one of those unusual sounding phones which he can imitate perfectly," said Mrs. Guenther. "A number of times we've answered the phone only to find that the ring came from Bob."

BOB . . . with Mrs. Guenther, is a pet.

Loser Trying To Overtake Student Elections

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Improper filing of financial forms could be the key to overturning University of Nebraska-Lincoln student government elections, a defeated presidential candidate said Friday.

Paul R. Morrison of St. Paul, currently Associated Students of the University of Nebraska second vice president, said he's filing a complaint with the ASUN Electoral Commission.

"I assume I might file it with student court" if the commission won't accept the complaint, he said. Since commissioners won't meet until the week of March 29, Morrison said he hopes they'll resolve the issue before April 7,

"when we're supposed to change administrations."

The ASUN executive posts are mainly at issue. Morrison said if winners are nullified before the inaugural date, "I assume the second-place candidates will take office."

That would vault Scott R. Cook of Sidney into the UNL student body presidency and the NU Board of Regents seat. Rachel C. Young of Valentine would become first vice president and John E. Welch of Curtis, second vice president.

Election-day winners of those offices, respectively, are William J. Mueller, Ogallala; Paula Jean Haeder, Omaha; and Dennis Martin, Elgin.

Should the election be nullified after those winners take office, "we'll have to have a special election," probably including races for ASUN Senate seats, Morrison said.

Although the ASUN presidential balloting also filed a state office on the Board of Regents, Morrison said Secretary of State Allen Beermann "said there's nothing he can do officially to step in," and indicated some complaints aren't justifiable to throw out election returns.

But Morrison said there's enough evidence, "in my mind, to nullify all those candidates in the Greek slate." His reference was to endorsements of candidates affiliated with Greek-letter fraternities and sororities, including Mueller, Miss Haeder and Martin.

Morrison said, "There was never a financial form filed by the Greek slate" or by those persons who distributed information on campus about the slate which "can be identified as campaign material."

Also, he said, some graduate students voted illegally for professional students (such as law and dentistry). And another graduate student "said she got a Teachers College (undergraduate) ballot," Morrison said.

Outgoing ASUN President Jim Say of Norfolk also noted "several complaints" about

Ogallala Man Killed At Car, Truck Plaza

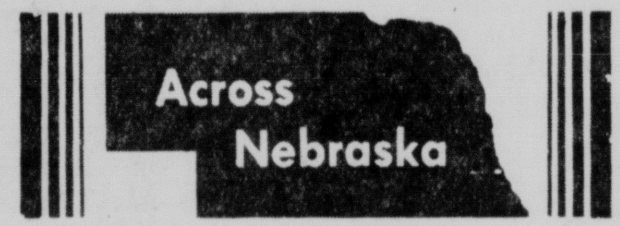

Ogallala (AP) — Keith County Atty. Pat Hays said late Friday he is considering filing charges of first degree murder against one of three persons held in connection with the shooting death of an Ogallala service station attendant.

The victim, Gary W. Olson, 28, of Ogallala was shot to death early Friday at a large auto and truck plaza near the Ogallala interchange on Interstate 80.

Hays said it is possible he will charge a second person with either aiding or abetting or as an accessory after the fact. But Hays did not specify which charges would be filed against which person.

Keith County authorities jailed two men and one woman in connection with the incident.

They were tentatively identified as David Amos Travis, Charles A. Darden, 42, and Janita R. Jones. No other information was given. Authorities said they were in a car with California license plates. They were taken into custody at the scene.

Stamford-Alma Schools Merge

Stamford (AP) — The Stamford and Alma school districts have voted to merge grades seven through 12, effective with the start of the 1976-77 school year. Stamford will continue its schools for pupils in kindergarten through the sixth grade. Others will attend the school at Alma.

School Lunch Payments Revealed

Chicago (AP) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture will make up a shortfall in commodity donations to Nebraska schools with cash payments totalling $241,498, officials announced Friday. Average daily participation in Nebraska schools has been nearly 201,000 in the lunch program, and 6,000 in the breakfast program, officials said. The National School Lunch Act stipulates that any shortfall between estimated value of foods to be donated to schools and the value of donated foods initially programmed for delivery in the fiscal year will be made up with cash payments.

Board Delays School Bond Vote

Hastings (UPI) — The Hastings School Board has reversed itself and decided to postpone asking district voters to approve a $3.7 million school bond issue in the May 11 primary. The board voted, 5-2, on Monday night to submit the bond issue to a vote, but met Thursday night and voted, 7-2, to table the resolution. The proposal may be discussed again next month.

Save Niobrara Group Elects Sandall

Columbus — The Save the Niobrara Association, a group formed to "preserve the Niobrara River in its present state" elected a statewide board of directors during a meeting here. Wes D. Sandall of Bassett was named president of the board. The group's primary goal is to get proper information to the public on the O'Neill project, an irrigation reservoir and canal system scheduled to be built on the Niobrara, according to Ted Hoffman, spokesman for the group.

Central Platte NRD Realignment OK'd

Kearney (UPI) — The Central Platte Natural Resources District board has voted to realign the district's 10 subdivisions to make the subdivisions equal in size, population and property valuation for election purposes. In other action, Ron Bishop, district manager, told the board that an advisory panel has recommended partial funding from the natural resource development fund of two watershed projects.

—Staying Ahead—

Buyer Can Cancel Door-To-Door Sale

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — Anyone you spend more money than you meant to on the wares of a persuasive door-to-door salesman you can cancel the deal. There is absolutely no need to keep expensive things that you really don't want or can't afford. A three-day cooling-off period applies to all purchases over $25 (and in some states to amounts even smaller). During that time you can cancel the sale and get every cent of your money back.

This cooling-off period has been the rule on a national level for almost two years. But many consumers still don't realize that it exists, says Kent Howerton, an attorney in the compliance division of the Federal Trade Commission. You can't count on the salesman to tell you about it, even though the FTC rule says he must. And although the cancellation privilege is noted in the contract in big letters, all too many consumers don't bother reading it.

Some people who are overruled by a charming salesman feel guilty about canceling. They don't want to go back on their word or fear disapproval of their friend of yesterday. They might even think that canceling will get them in trouble. But that salesman who talked his way into your wallet has no feeling about you personally — he just wanted the sale. What's more, you cancel just by dropping a card into a mailbox with no need to talk to the company or the salesman ever again.

Here are the FTC rules on door-to-door sales:

(1) The salesman has to give you a receipt or a copy of the contract you signed written in the same language that the sale was made (no English-language contracts for people who barely speak it). Next to the place where you sign or on the front page of the receipt, it must state in big letters that you have the right to cancel.

(2) The salesman must also give you two copies of a notice of cancellation which can be detached from the contract or receipt. This should contain the name and address of the seller, the date of the transaction (make sure this is filled in accurately), and the date by which the sale can be canceled if you change your mind. The contract can't contain any clauses waiving or restricting this right.

(3) You cancel by dropping a signed and dated copy of that notice into the mailbox anytime before midnight on the third business day following the sale, or by sending a telegram (don't try to cancel by phone).

(4) After cancellation the company must return your money within 10 days along with any contracts you may have signed. They can't collect on any security you might have pledged. You can't be charged a cancellation fee.

(5) If goods have to be returned the seller must pick them up or arrange for you to mail them back at his expense. He can't charge you for the postage. Of course the items must be returned in good condition. If the seller says he'll come for them but doesn't within 20 days you can throw the goods out or keep them without any further obligation — and still must be given your money back. However, if you agree to mail them back and don't, you'll have to pay.

(6) The salesman is required to tell you about your right to cancel. If he doesn't ask him why — he should learn that his customers know the law, even if he doesn't. It is a violation to suggest that the contract can't be broken once signed.

This rule applies whether you buy five $5 items or one thing costing $25 or more (and some states have even tighter standards than the FTC). But it doesn't cover sales made entirely by mail or phone. Sales closed in your home after you made a trip to the store to examine the goods, jobs done in your home by workmen you've called (although it does cover any additional services the workmen might try to sell you), the sale of real estate, insurance or stocks and commodities by a registered broker-dealer. Some states have slightly different exceptions but this is the federal rule.

Kent Howerton advises that you not sign any contract or receipt presented by a door-to-door salesman if it doesn't include the cancellation notice. Report all violations to him at the Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C. 20580.

You also can send complaints on this or any other matter involving door-to-door salesmen to the industry's trade group, Direct Selling Assn., 1730 M St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. They'll forward your letter to the company involved and if it's one of their members try to straighten out the problem.

Markets... But

Price Index Is Ignored By Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The best showing by the government's consumer price index in four and a half years failed to budge the stock market Friday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks wandered in a narrow range all day and closed at 979.85, unchanged from Thursday.

Losers held a slim edge on gamblers in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume slowed to 18.09 million shares down from 20.33 million Thursday and the highest total since the first trading session of the year on Jan. 2 when 10.30 million shares changed hands.

As the market opened the Labor Department reported that its consumer price index rose only 0.1 per cent in February for its smallest increase since September of 1971.

But the market appeared to have taken the news into account in advance with its sharp rise earlier in the year. And analysts said investors seemed in a mood to wait and see whether the slackening trend in inflation will continue if business keeps picking up.

Brokers also noted that a good part of the market's attention was focused on the outlook for interest rates.

After Thursdays close the Federal Reserve reported an other jump in the basic measure of the money supply.

That gave rise to renewed concern that the Fed might sooner or later feel the need to tighten credit in its efforts to hold inflationary pressures down.

Chicago (AP) — Soybean futures advanced more than 4 cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade Friday, but other grains were mostly lower.

Soybean meal closed on an irregular tone in deferred options but the nearby March, which expires Monday, advanced about $5 a ton. Soy oil was up some 20 points. Wheat lost 2 cents, corn 1 1/2 while oats were irregular. Fed brokers gained up to 1/2 cent a pound under late short covering.

House Catches On Fire Twice In One Morning

A fire which completely destroyed the front porch of a house at 1015 Plum early Friday morning resulted later in the morning and damaged portions of the roof. Lincoln firemen said.

As Cole was investigating the blaze shortly after 10 a.m. he noticed that wind had caused some old shingles under a layer of newer shingles to ignite. Firemen returned to the scene and extinguished that blaze. He added.

The occupant of the house, Dan Breen, was not injured in the blaze. Firemen said.

Star Carrier Laurel Tubbs

Laurel Tubbs

Stipend Won

Laurel Tubbs' efficiency, courtesy and conscientiousness have earned her a great deal of respect and affection as well as some more tangible benefits.

A carrier for The Lincoln Star at Beatrice, Laurel enjoys a steadily growing income most of which she saves for the future. On March 14, Laurel's savings received a healthy boost when she was awarded a $250 educational scholarship by the Journal-Star Printing Co. in recognition of her excellence in route work, citizenship and academic standing.

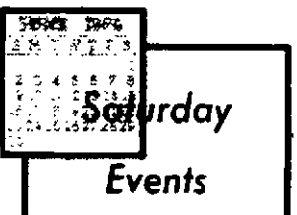

A student at Paddock Lane School, Laurel is earning perfect "1" grades in all subjects, plays the piano and clarinet in the school's band and orchestra and is a valued member of the track team.

She attends First Presbyterian Church where she serves as a lamplighter and is active in the Girl Scout program.

Her vacation plans include visits to the East Coast, Colorado and South Dakota.

As to the future, Laurel would like to become a physical education instructor.

Pleased with their daughter's business success, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Tubbs feel that the route has taught Laurel to meet people and assume responsibility and highly recommend route work for all young people.

Special Rail Available For Blind Bowlers

By JOANNE FARRIS

QUESTION: Can a blind person bowl? I used to enjoy that pastime, but when I became blind two years ago I expected that my bowling days were over. Now my grandson, who has come to our town to attend college, says there is a bowling aid I can buy so that he and I can go bowling together. Do you know anything about this?

ANSWER: Yes, you can order a bowling rail for about $30. It stands 36 inches high, and is from 9 to 12 feet long. It's balanced for standing at the side of the alley by four bowling balls that fit into the base of the frame.

By guiding yourself with your left hand on the rail you will be able to bowl again. Isn't your grandson a wonder to have put you onto the trail of such a device?

The bowling rail is one of a great number of aids and appliances now available for the blind and visually handicapped from the American Foundation for the Blind.

For more information send for their "Ideas For Better Living" booklet. Write to American Foundation for the Blind, 15 West 16th St., New York, N.Y. 10011.

Through this catalog you can purchase many things, from an insulin syringe marked for use by blind persons to tools, kitchen aids, general household helpers, mathematical instruments, clocks and watches, and games of all sorts.

This is the place to write to if you need jumbo playing cards or bridge or pinocle cards marked with Braille. Other games available include: Chinese checkers, regular checkers, backgammon, chess, dominos, Monopoly, Parcheesi, Scrabble and cribbage.

Anyone with a visually handicapped or blind friend or relative will find this catalog a veritable treasure trove of gift ideas, many of which are so practical that they fall in the category of necessities.

QUESTION: Last year you wrote a column about wives needing to receive financial education from their husbands so that they (the wives) will be able to handle the family finances if the need ever arises. I agree wholeheartedly. But how about a single woman? Is there any help for her?

ANSWER: There are beginning to be some women's banks, and most commercial banks have awakened to the fact that many American women do have financial matters to deal with and have competence, with the result that you should be able to find an officer of your bank who is either a woman or alert to and interested in problems like yours.

The First National City Bank of New York has issued a pamphlet which you may want to send for. It is part of that bank's public information program, and it is called "Borrowing Basics for Women."

In addition to providing guidelines on establishing credit, the booklet gives full information on recent laws which have improved women's rights to borrow.

Robbery Claim Proves To Be Embezzlement

An alleged Jan. 20 armed robbery at the Treasure City gas station at 48th and Leighton proved to be an embezzlement scheme, according to the Lancaster County Attorney's Office.

Prosecutor Steve Yungblut said it was determined the 25-year-old female attendant had given the money to a 19-year-old male acquaintance.

Both have been entered in the Lancaster County Attorney's Pretrial Diversion Program for first-time felony offenders.

Tucker Motors Lot Attacked By Vandals

Police are investigating vandalism involving six vehicles on the Tucker Motors lot at 1400 Cornhusker Hwy. sometime early Friday.

Damage to the vehicles ranged from stolen hubcaps to broken rear view mirrors, taillights, a windshield and a radio antenna. Damage was believed to be more than $100 they said.

'Undresser' Undone By Hit And Jog

Jacksonville, Fla. (UPI) — A 16-year-old youth was arrested in connection with four cases in which women had clothing ripped from their bodies in the laundry room of an apartment complex.

The youth was arrested after he pulled down the bottom half of a woman's two-piece bathing suit while she was loading clothes in a washer, police said.

In his haste to get away, the youth was run over and knocked down by a jogger who happened to be passing by. A police spokesman said the boy was hit so hard by the jogger that he was still down when police arrived.

Great Afternoon Of TV

Nebraska basketball fans, who starved Thursday night while the NCAA tournament field was being reduced to eight, will feast Saturday on three great attractions presented by NBC-TV.

The day will get underway at 11:15 a.m. when Big Eight Conference champion Missouri goes against Big Ten runnerup Michigan for the Midwest Regional championship at Louisville's Freedom Hall.

The feature attraction will come up two hours later when No. 1 Indiana opposes No. 2 Marquette in a game many feel will decide the national championship. It will be played on the Louisiana State campus at Baton Rouge, La.

Windup of the tripleheader attraction will have the defending champion UCLA Bruins going against Arizona, which pulled the upset of the tourney Thursday night by stopping Nevada-Las Vegas in overtime.

The only regional title game that won't be seen in this area is the Rutgers-Virginia Military battle for the East championship in Greensboro, N.C. It will be shown only in the eastern part of the nation.

Matchups in the finals at Philadelphia next Saturday will have the East winner going against the Mideast champion in the first game and the West-Midwest winners facing each other in the second game. The championship and third-place game will be played on Monday night, March 29.

NCAA Notes And Quotes

Indiana defeated Marquette 75-69 in the Mideast Regional at Nashville, Tenn., in 1973. To get a repeat victory, the Hoosiers will have to do a better job than Western Michigan did Thursday night against the Warriors' guards.

"The biggest factor in the game was not being able to shut off their guards from penetrating," Western Michigan coach Eldon Miller said. "You can't let their guards dribble around your guards and play a man-to-man defense."

Marquette's task will be to stop Scott May's shooting and keep the ball away from 6-11 Kent Benson of the Hoosiers Jerome Whitehead, who'll probably guard Benson, said. "I'll just try to get in front of him and keep him from getting the ball. He's big, and I don't want to try to win a leaning contest with him."

Jimmy Rappis was the key for Arizona in its win over Nevada and he'll likely have to be a key again when he goes against UCLA's Marques Johnson in a battle of guards. Rappis hurt a heel in the first half, but came back in the second half. Should he not be at full strength, Arizona's chances are slim against the Bruins, who have a home court advantage.

Missouri has a chance against Michigan if it can get another stellar performance from all-American guard Willie Smith, who had 30 points against Texas Tech Thursday night. "Smith was everything we heard he was," Tech coach Gerald Myers said. "He was hitting those 25-footers and they weren't set shots. They were jumpers."

Michigan edged Notre Dame and Coach Johnny Orr thought the key things for the Wolverines were a more aggressive defense in the second half, especially against Irish star Adrian Dantley.

VMI Hoping For Upset

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Just five years after stumbling through a 1-25 basketball season, Virginia Military Institute is one victory away from the national collegiate championship semifinals.

Coach Bill Blair's scrappy Keydets can achieve that distinction if they make it three straight against nationally-ranked teams, this time undefeated Rutgers, in the NCAA Eastern Regional finals Saturday.

The winner will move to the national semifinals against the Midwest Regional champion, either Missouri or Michigan.

"We're here. Don't ask me how," Blair grinned Friday, the day after his unranked Keydets won their 10th straight in a school-record 22-9 season with a 71-66 overtime victory against 17th-ranked DePaul.

Rutgers, 30-0, ranked fourth nationally and the No. 3 scoring team in the country, gained its regional finals berth with a 93-79 romp over Connecticut.

Indiana-Marquette Tilt Set

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Saturday's showdown between the two top ranked college basketball teams is a dream come true to coach Al McGuire of No. 2 Marquette, but coach Bobby Knight of No. 1 Indiana says it's just another ball game.

"Pressure is largely a figment on the imagination of sportswriters," said Knight, whose top-ranked Hoosiers defeated seventh-ranked Alabama, 74-69, Thursday night in the NCAA Mideast regionals for their 29th straight win.

"What we've done in the past, and what Marquette has done in the past, means nothing," Knight said. "It wouldn't make any difference if we were 0-and-29. This is tomorrow's ball game. I don't buy that about the pressure building up

You have to forget what you have done in the past.

Knight said he did not cheer for either team during the second NCAA Mideast regional contest Thursday night in which Marquette defeated No. 19 Western Michigan 62-57. But McGuire admitted he had pulled for Indiana in the first game and was glad the nation's two highest ranked teams won and advanced to Saturday's 1 p.m. CST playoff.

The winner Saturday will advance to the NCAA semifinals in Philadelphia.

I did want Indiana to win, because they are No. 1," said McGuire whose Warriors are 27-1 this season. "This game Saturday is something I've always wanted. You don't like to think of it because of some fear it won't come true, so I have put a block in my mind," McGuire said. McGuire and Knight also disagreed on the significance of having just a day to get ready for each other.

We don't do anything special, so time to prepare means nothing to us in that regard," Knight said.

But McGuire complained one day was not enough time to prepare to defend against Indiana's all-Americans Scott May and Kent Benson.

Scott May is the key," McGuire said. "There is no way to prepare for him in only one day."

Knight was asked if fate would play a part in Saturday's contest.

I don't think fate has a hell of a lot to do with it," he said. "Unless fate is 6-8 and can hit a hook shot."

Missouri Eyeing Michigan

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Although he's seen him play all year, Missouri Coach Norm Stewart still catches himself watching Willie Smith just like any other basketball fan.

I enjoyed watching him tonight," said the happy Stewart after Smith had pumped in 30 points Thursday night to lead 14th-ranked Missouri to an 86-75 victory over No. 16 Texas Tech and into Saturday's NCAA Midwest Regional finals against ninth-ranked Michigan.

The Wolverines 23-6 earned their final berth with an 80-76 decision over seventh-ranked Notre Dame.

I thought it was a good performance," Stewart said of Smith's display. "I've seen him penetrate more, but it was a good night for him."

It didn't begin that way, however. Smith hit only one basket in the first 11 minutes as Texas Tech with center Rick Bullock scoring 12 of his 23 points charged into a 25-22 lead. Then Smith found his shooting eye and began firing in long jump shots.

The 24-point-per-game scorer hit six baskets during a 19-6 Missouri surge that put the Tigers in control at 41-31 just before halftime en route to raising their record to 26-4.

Kim Anderson, who along with Jim Kennedy added 15 points to the Missouri attack, hit three quick buckets at the start of the second half as Missouri pulled in front by 17 points.

Smith says that playing the game is as important as winning. "Give me five men and a basketball and I don't care who wins," he said. "Still, he did care enough to parade around the locker room shouting 'We're in the finals!'"

Smith was everything we heard he was," said Tech Coach Gerald Myers. "He was hitting those 25-footers and they weren't set shots. They were jumpers."

Wharton, Bergman, Killion Lead All-State

By KEN HAMBLETON
State College Writer

Joe Wharton has many talents, but the one he lacks is the ability to stand still.

"I can't go half speed or stand around. I have to keep moving in order to feel comfortable," said Wharton, a 5-11 senior guard at Doane. "I love basketball and when I play I want to play hard and win if we can, but most of all play."

Wharton and teammate Bob Tagart, along with Hastings center Paul Bergman, Wayne center John Redmond and Kearney scoring machine Loren Killion lead the 1976 Sunday Journal and Star All-State College Basketball team.

Wharton, who grew up in Evanston, Ill., earned a starting spot his freshman year with the Tigers and became the fourth leading scorer in Doane history this year. His 18.6 points-per-game average, along with an eight-assists-and-five-rebounds-per-game average, helped the Tigers gain a share of the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference for the first time in three years and earn the NAIA District II title.

"Coach Erickson (Bob) has always pushed the guards to be the leaders of the team," said Wharton. "And the fact I was team captain this year gave me even more responsibility."

That responsibility proved to be an aid in Wharton's play. "When I was a freshman and sophomore I used to get a lot of silly fouls and foul out a lot," said Wharton.

"But I learned that if the team leader gets hung up, then the rest of the team seems to get down too," Wharton said. "So I just figured this year was going to be my last and we wanted to win the title and go to Kansas City (site of the NAIA national meet) so I would do more to help the team."

"I was always being told to 'just calm down' and I could play better," Wharton said. "And I guess that it finally sank in."

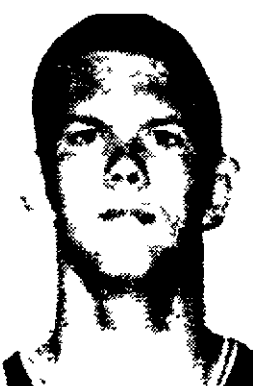

Starting off the season with a shaved head and a white headband, Wharton drew a lot of attention in the Tiger road games. "I like the crowd reacting, whether it's boos or cheers. It just seems to get me inspired to play. I guess that just fits in with the emotional way I play."

Killion, a junior and Bergman, a sophomore, the only underclassmen on the first team, had the jobs of filling the roles of former all-stars Tom Kropp and Paul Thomas.

Killion, a 6-7 forward, led the state colleges in scoring with a 21.4 points-per-game average, along with 52 per cent shooting accuracy. His 556 points this year put him just 499 behind Kropp's scoring record of 1,884 career points.

He's a great shooter and more of an outside scorer than Kropp was," said Kearney coach Jerry Hueser. "It's impossible to compare him with Kropp because they're two different players, but Loren is one of the best we've ever had."

Bergman, the 6-8, 240-pound Hastings center, was almost unheard of last year as a freshman because he played behind two-time all-stater Thomas.

A 15.4-point scoring average,

10-rebound average and a 60 per cent shooting accuracy marked Bergman's year. "He got off to a good start playing Pepperdine's Marcos Leite to a standstill in our first game of the year," said Hastings coach Lynn Farrell. Pepperdine was eliminated from the NCAA playoffs Thursday by a loss to UCLA.

He made a lot of improvement this year and I hope the other coaches are right in thinking he could become one of the best state college basketball players ever," said Farrell.

Rounding out the first team are seniors Tagart and Redmond of Wayne, the two top rebounders in the state. Redmond is the only returning member of the top five all-stars.

The second leading scorer in the state with a 20.7 average, Redmond also maintained a 13.1 rebounds-per-game average. Without a big man, Wayne had to rely on 6-5 Redmond to play center. Redmond is recognized by opposing coaches as the hardest worker in the state on the court.

Tagart didn't see much action until this year, but the 6-6 forward from Tecumseh rallied the Tigers numerous times during the NAIA district playoffs and in the first game of the national tournament. He held a 12.7-rebounds-per-game average.

The second five is headed by Hastings junior Kurt McKeone, a 6-6 forward, who averaged 16 points, nine rebounds and shot at a 53 per cent accuracy for the season. "He had the big games for us when we needed him," said Farrell. "And if he hadn't injured his ankle late in the season, he may have been the most outstanding player in the state this year. He carried us quite a few times through some rough stretches."

Two juniors, Tom Westover of Doane and Angelo Lilly of Nebraska Wesleyan, senior Rick Anderson of Wayne and Aubrey Matthews, a freshman from Peru State, round out the second team.

Westover, a 6-9 guard from Lincoln Northeast, carried a 10.6 scoring average, but in his last 14 games as a starter he averaged more than 20 points a game. He also hit two free throws in the final moments to give Doane a first round win in the NAIA National playoffs and help the Tigers tie a school season record of 21 wins.

Lilly and Anderson both averaged 15 points per game and were considered among the best the state has ever had at those positions. Matthews, a freshman from Lake Charles, La., averaged more than 17 points a game for the Bobcats.

Courage Marks Arizona Drive

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If there's an award for courage Jimmy Rappis deserves to have it hands down," said Arizona Coach Fred The Fox Snowden in the wake of his team's dramatic comeback upset of No. 3-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas in the NCAA West Regional basketball tournament.

Snowden was referring to his senior guard, a 6-foot-2 bundle of bandages who has been injured so often in his four year career as a Wildcat the coach actually winces when he talks of him.

Rappis stole the show from the flashy run-and-gun Rebels of Nevada Thursday night and before fouling out late in regulation play, scored 24 points and passed off for 12 assists.

He broke an ankle as a freshman, he had a ruptured appendix two years ago and he wasn't supposed to even live. Then he had more ankle injuries and last year he was hurt so much he actually walked around campus on crutches and a cane.

But he missed just one of our games," said Snowden. "I'm very lucky," said the unassuming guard. "I've been lucky to have three operations and still come back to play. The coach knows me and what I can do, and if I'm hurt too bad he knows not to play me."

Last Oct. 16 Rappis had surgery to remove a spinal disc. They told me he might not walk properly again," said Snowden. "But he has played in all of our games."

Arizona's bandage boy suffered a heel injury late in the first half Thursday night, yet played the rest of the game. It's on ice right now," said Snowden. "If he can walk at all, he'll play against UCLA."

The Wildcats, 15th-ranked, are underdogs to No. 5 UCLA in Saturday's nationally televised West regional final.

The Bruins, winners over 20th-ranked Pepperdine 70-61, have not played as well at home as Bartow would have liked the past month.

We have played lethargically at home, but we have shown more consistency on the road," he said.

Gerard, Mackie Current Leaders

Boulder Colo. — Larry Gerard and Gene Mackie sparked the Nebraska gymnastics team to a lead after the compulsory routines in the first day of the Big Eight gymnastics meet Friday at the Colorado Fieldhouse.

Gerard, the current leader in the all-around, scored the day's highest mark with a 9.5 in the high bar while Mackie second in the all-around holds the lead in the parallel bar event.

The Huskers placed one performer in the top three of every event except the floor exercise. Gerard and Duane West are currently tied for fifth.

The optionals and team finals begin at 2 p.m. Saturday with the individual championships starting at 7 p.m.

NI scored 206.5 followed by Iowa State with 199.70, Oklahoma with 193.05 and Colorado with 186.60.

Alex Pope, Keith Heaver and Mark Truppel of Iowa State are the current leaders in the floor exercise, rings and the vault respectively.

VMI Hoping For Upset

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Just five years after stumbling through a 1-25 basketball season, Virginia Military Institute is one victory away from the national collegiate championship semifinals.

Coach Bill Blair's scrappy Keydets can achieve that distinction if they make it three straight against nationally-ranked teams, this time undefeated Rutgers, in the NCAA Eastern Regional finals Saturday.

The winner will move to the national semifinals against the Midwest Regional champion, either Missouri or Michigan.

"We're here. Don't ask me how," Blair grinned Friday, the day after his unranked Keydets won their 10th straight in a school-record 22-9 season with a 71-66 overtime victory against 17th-ranked DePaul.

Rutgers, 30-0, ranked fourth nationally and the No. 3 scoring team in the country, gained its regional finals berth with a 93-79 romp over Connecticut.

Indiana basketball coach Bobby Knight gestures as he cracks a joke about Marquette coach Al McGuire, left, as the two men met at a news conference Friday. Their two teams meet in the NCAA Mideast finals Saturday at Louisiana State.

Indiana-Marquette Tilt Set

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Saturday's showdown between the two top ranked college basketball teams is a dream come true to coach Al McGuire of No. 2 Marquette, but coach Bobby Knight of No. 1 Indiana says it's just another ball game.

"Pressure is largely a figment on the imagination of sportswriters," said Knight, whose top-ranked Hoosiers defeated seventh-ranked Alabama, 74-69, Thursday night in the NCAA Mideast regionals for their 29th straight win.

"What we've done in the past, and what Marquette has done in the past, means nothing," Knight said. "It wouldn't make any difference if we were 0-and-29. This is tomorrow's ball game. I don't buy that about the pressure building up.

"You have to forget what you have done in the past."

Knight said he did not cheer for either team during the second NCAA Mideast regional contest Thursday night in which Marquette defeated No. 19 Western Michigan, 62-57. But McGuire admitted he had pulled for Indiana in the first game and was glad the nation's two highest ranked teams won and advanced to Saturday's 1 p.m. CST playoff.

The winner Saturday will advance to the NCAA semifinals in Philadelphia.

"I did want Indiana to win, because they are No. 1," said McGuire, whose Warriors are 27-1 this season. "This game Saturday is something I've always wanted. You don't like to think of it because of some fear it won't come true, so I have put a block in my mind," McGuire said.

McGuire and Knight also disagreed on the significance of having just a day to get ready for each other.

"We don't do anything special, so time to prepare means nothing to us in that regard," Knight said.

But McGuire complained one day was not enough time to prepare to defend against Indiana's all-Americans Scott May and Kent Benson.

"Scott May is the key," McGuire said. "There is no way to prepare for him in only one day."

Knight was asked if fate would play a part in Saturday's contest.

"I don't think fate has a hell of a lot to do with it," he said. "Unless fate is 6-8 and can hit a hook shot."

Missouri Eyeing Michigan

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Although he's seen him play all year, Missouri Coach Norm Stewart still catches himself watching Willie Smith just like any other basketball fan.

"I enjoyed watching him tonight," said the happy Stewart after Smith had pumped in 30 points Thursday night to lead 14th-ranked Missouri to an 86-75 victory over No. 16 Texas Tech and into Saturday's NCAA Midwest Regional finals against ninth-ranked Michigan.

The Wolverines, 23-6, earned their final berth with an 80-76 decision over seventh-ranked Notre Dame.

"I thought it was a good performance," Stewart said of Smith's display. "I've seen him penetrate more, but it was a good night for him."

It didn't begin that way, however. Smith hit only one basket in the first 11 minutes as Texas Tech, with center Rick Bullock scoring 12 of his 23 points, charged into a 25-22 lead. Then Smith found his shooting eye and began firing in long jump shots.

The 24-point-per-game scorer hit six baskets during a 19-6 Missouri surge that put the Tigers in control at 41-31 just before halftime en route to raising their record to 26-4.

Kim Anderson, who along with Jim Kennedy added 15 points to the Missouri attack, hit three quick buckets at the start of the second half as Missouri pulled in front by 17 points.

Smith says that playing the game is as important as winning. "Give me five men and a basketball and I don't care who wins," he said. Still, he did care enough to parade around the locker room shouting: "We're in the finals!"

"Smith was everything we heard he was," said Tech Coach Gerald Myers. "He was hitting those 25-footers. And they weren't set shots. They were jumpers."

Wharton, Bergman, Killion Lead All-State

By KEN HAMBLETON

State College Writer

Joe Wharton has many talents, but the one he lacks is the ability to stand still.

"I can't go half speed or stand around. I have to keep moving in order to feel comfortable," said Wharton, a 5-11 senior guard at Doane. "I love basketball and when I play I want to play hard and win if we can, but most of all play."

Wharton and teammate Bob Tagart, along with Hastings center Paul Bergman, Wayne center John Redmond and Kearney scoring machine Loren Killion lead the 1976 Sunday Journal and Star All-State College Basketball team.

Wharton, who grew up in Evanston, Ill., earned a starting spot his freshman year with the Tigers and became the fourth leading scorer in Doane history this year. His 18.6 points-per-game average, along with an eight-assists- and five-rebounds-per-game average, helped the Tigers gain a share of the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference for the first time in three years and earn the NAIA District 11 title.

"Coach Erickson (Bob) has always pushed the guards to be the leaders of the team," said Wharton. "And the fact I was team captain this year gave me even more responsibility."

That responsibility proved to be an aid in Wharton's play. "When I was a freshman and sophomore I used to get a lot of silly fouls and foul out a lot," said Wharton.

"But I learned that if the team leader gets hung up, then the rest of the team seems to get down too," Wharton said. "So I just figured this year was going to be my last and we wanted to win the title and go to Kansas City (site of the NAIA national meet) so I would do more to help the team."

"I was always being told to 'just calm down' and I could play better," Wharton said. "And I guess that it finally sank in."

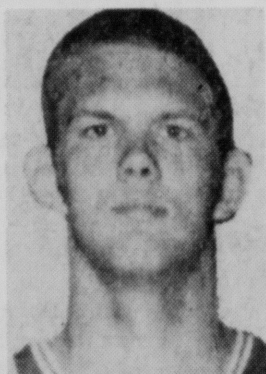

Starting off the season with a shaved head and a white headband, Wharton drew a lot of attention in the Tiger road games. "I like the crowd reacting, whether it's boos or cheers. It just seems to get me inspired to play. I guess that just fits in with the emotional way I play."

Killion, a junior and Bergman, a sophomore, the only underclassmen on the first team, had the jobs of filling the roles of former all-stars Tom Kropp and Paul Thomas.

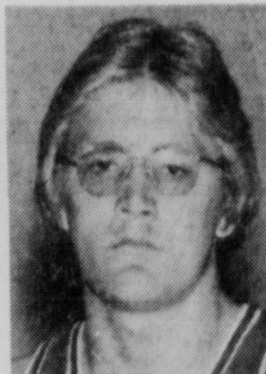

Killion, a 6-7 forward, led the state colleges in scoring with a 21.4 points-per-game average, along with 52 per cent shooting

Courage Marks Arizona Drive

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "If there's an award for courage, Jimmy Rappis deserves to have it hands down," said Arizona Coach Fred "The Fox" Snowden in the wake of his team's dramatic comeback upset of No. 3-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas in the NCAA West Regional basketball tournament.

Snowden was referring to his senior guard, a 6-foot-2 bundle of bandages who has been injured so often in his four-year career as a Wildcat the coach actually winces when he talks of him.

Rappis stole the show from the flashy, run-and-gun Rebels of Nevada Thursday night and, before fouling out late in regulation play, scored 24 points and passed off for 12 assists.

"He broke an ankle as a freshman, he had a ruptured appendix two years ago and he wasn't supposed to even live. Then he had more ankle injuries and last year he was hurt so much he actually walked around campus on crutches and a cane."

"But he missed just one of our games," said Snowden. "I'm very lucky," said the unassuming guard. "I've been lucky to have three operations and still come back to play. The coach knows me and what I can do, and if I'm hurt too bad he knows not to play me."

Last Oct. 16, Rappis had surgery to remove a spinal disc. "They told me he might not walk properly again," said Snowden. "But he has played in all of our games."

Arizona's bandage boy suffered a heel injury late in the first half Thursday night, yet played the rest of the game. "It's on ice right now," said Snowden. "If he can walk at all, he'll play against UCLA."

The Wildcats, 15th-ranked, are underdogs to No. 5 UCLA in Saturday's nationally televised West regional final.

The Bruins, winners over 20th-ranked Pepperdine 70-61, have not played as well at home as Bartow would have liked the past month.

"We have played lethargically at home, but we have shown more consistency on the road," he said.

Gerard, Mackie Current Leaders

Boulder, Colo. — Larry Gerard and Gene Mackie sparked the Nebraska gymnastics team to a lead after the compulsorys in the first day of the Big Eight gymnastics meet Friday at the Colorado Fieldhouse.

Gerard, the current leader in the all-around, scored the day's highest mark with a 9.5 in the high bar, while Mackie, second in the all-around, holds the lead in the parallel bar event.

The Huskers placed one performer in the top three of every event except the floor exercise. Gerard and Duane West are currently tied for fifth.

The optionals and team finals begin at 2 p.m. Saturday with the individual championships starting at 7 p.m.

NWU scored 206.5 followed by Iowa State with 199.70; Oklahoma with 193.05 and Colorado with 185.60.

Alex Pepe, Keith Heaver and Mark Trippel of Iowa State are the current leaders in the floor exercise, rings, and the vault respectively.

Steve Dickey of Nebraska is tied for second in the pommel horse and Gene Mackie tied for second in the vault.

"We didn't do as well as expected in the floor exercise, but we peaked when Gerard scored the 9.5 in the high bar," said NU coach Francis Allen. "The effort from our team was fantastic and I just hope we can carry this pace into the finals." The meet winner qualifies for the NCAA nationals, at Temple, April 1-3.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Saturday, March 20

Next month for Taurus, should bring the satisfaction of knowing what it means to be backstage, to have inside information to get the story behind the story. In April, the Taurus native — especially those born between 4 and 6 a.m. — will rise above the petty, teach, learn, be given access to privileged information and could be asked to represent a club group, organization. Media appearances could also be featured for Taurus in April.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Vitality makes a comeback. You get new hope, optimism. You're better able to communicate, to collect money for efforts. Take cash this time and let credit go. Can't Capricorn persons figure prominently. What seems a subjective decision is actually based on factual information.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Area of prevarication receives benefit of greater light. Friend proves loyal. A variety of opportunities indicated. Money is involved in play for travel, entertainment. Accents social invitation. Be receptive to ideas aimed at expansion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Lie low. Be more aware of details than is your general disposition. Deal with partnership, marital questions. Let others take initiative. Compile information. build solid case on strong base. Leo, Aquarius, Scorpio persons may be in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be ready for action. Including change and travel. A variety of opportunities indicated. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius figure prominently. Member of opposite sex pays compliment — and means it. Health, routine and diet are important. Act accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Creative juices flow — you feel more alive. You are able now to articulate meanings, style. Personal magnetism enables you to win popularity contests. Your surroundings will be more harmonious. Quest for happiness in domestic life is closer to fulfillment.

LIBRA (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) One who opposed you comes to your aid. Financial picture is brighter. You feel more secure. A contract or agreement needs close scrutiny. Refuse to give up something for nothing. Don't sell yourself short.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You're paid debt or bill due for past effort. You finish assignment — let go of burden not rightly your own. Aries, Libra figure in picture. Accents on personal possessions, collections, appraisals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Lunar cycle is such that you can make new starts. Be more independent in thought and action. You win major point. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. Avoid lifting heavy objects. Keep health resolutions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your sensitivity is showing — others see it and some respect you for it. But there are others who may try to exploit this side of you. Know it. Be observant and perceptive who seeks something for nothing. Cancer and another Capricorn could be in picture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Accent on friendship, creativity, romantic interests. Your wishes in some areas will be fulfilled. You probably will have to make a minor compromise. Spread wings — don't feel rooted to one spot or concept. Open lines of communication.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Money, values, possessions, how to increase financial gains — these all are spotlighted. One in professional capacity does opinion. Listen but don't dilute principles. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio figure in picture.

IF MARCH 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are a combination of independence, sensitivity, and a fiery forthrightness which makes you an engine to others and also to yourself. You make new, profitable start this year and July could be your most significant month of 1976. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. You are going to be happier — and better off financially — too.

There is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to help you find your fortune. The number of letters in the name of the person you are thinking of is 6 or more, subtract 6. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your lucky number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your lucky numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 6. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
